Farm-City Exchange Takes Place Daily At Berks County Farm Market

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

READING (Berks Co.) — In a way, a "farm-city" type of exchange takes place every week during farm market season for one Berks County orchard.

Customers of Angora Fruit Market, most of them not born and raised on a farm, often pose the following popular question to owners Alan and Leslie Roth:

Do you grow your own apples?

"I am really surprised by the lack of knowledge of consumers," said Leslie, when she pointed out some 4,000 trees on the property, many of them in the orchards visible from the farm lane. "It's frightening."

Leslie, an exchangee this year at the Berks County Farm-City event, said the 22-acre farm market posts fliers, helping to educate consumers. But in her job working behind the counter, she also understands the role of good customer communication — something she learned was integral when she joined Casey Allyn, morning show co-host on country radio station WIOV FM 105, Ephrata.

Alan Roth, Leslie's husband, purchased Angora Farm in 1976, home to 35 varieties of apples on

In her job working behind the counter, she understands the role of good customer communication. Alan, Leslie's husband, purchased Angora Farm in 1976, home to 35 varieties of apples on two-thirds of the farm. The orchard includes two acres of pears and a small parcel, the "garden plot," planted with pumpkins and gourds. The Roths also grow some tomatoes for the market. Photo by Andy Andrews

Wide Awake Farm Is Environmentally Wide Awake

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Editor

CLEARVILLE, (Bedford Co.) - Large, efficient, food production units are often thought of as being unfriendly to the environment But Wide Awake Farm located near Clearville in Bedford County proves those thoughts wrong

This 1,250-sow multiplier farm for Purina's Pig Improvement Co recently received the national pork industry's environment award for being an example of how large hog operations can use their resources to enhance the environment while protecting it from any harm

Much of the credit for the environmentally friendly farm goes to Robb Meinen, the farm's manager Meinen says he often thinks about the relationship between the farm, its watershed and the embattled Chesapeake Bay where every drop of water from the farm eventually goes

The two ponds that provide wildlife habitat and good fishing for employees and neighbors are the first noticeable friendly environmental aspects of the farm. In addition, their lagoon that holds 2.2 million gal. of manure is lined with a polypropylene liner and is fenced.

Meinen worked in Delaware before moving to Wide Awake Farm four years ago. There he became aware that every farmer must know where his watershed is "Cleaning up the Bay is not only a responsibility, but a necessity," he said

The perimeter is walked weekly to check for potential problems and to record activity from the leak detector A rain gauge is checked weekly or after any precipitation along with the lagoon depth gauge

The lagoon is emptied to its lowest level every fall and spreading resumes in spring Manure is applied to the farm's hay fields or neighboring land They have a total of eight farms Hay fields are made up of mixed grasses to maximize nutrient uptake and to control runoff and erosion

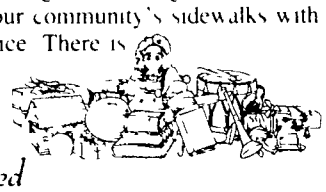
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

DECEMBER 6-12, 1999

ST. NICHOLAS, DECEMBER 6.

'TIS A GIFT TO BE SIMPLE

Let us take a renewed approach to the holidays by choosing our traditions with care. What small improvements can we make to add meaning, not glitter, to our holidays? Will you spend more time than money with children? Are listening, laughter, favors and compliments among your gifts? Will you spend your money well and only on items you value? If you are a letter writer, will your Christmas cards reflect your thoughts beyond peace and goodwill? Light a candle of remembrance or line your community's sidewalks with luminaries for the solstice. There is no one way, no right way, except that it be your chosen gift.



A gift much expected is paid, not given.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☛ Let children cut wrapping-paper scraps into strips to make decorative paper chains for the tree.

MAPLE SYRUP COOKIES

- 1-1/2 cups maple syrup
- 1/2 cup white sugar
- 1/2 cup (1 stick) butter or margarine
- 1 teaspoon baking soda dissolved in 1 tablespoon water
- 1 cup rolled oats
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 2 cups flour, approximate

Heat maple syrup, sugar, and butter or margarine until just short of boiling. Remove from stove and add baking soda and water. Let cool, then add oats, salt and enough flour to roll out. Roll to about 1/4 inch thick and cut with a cookie cutter. Bake at 375° F. for about 8 minutes, until lightly browned.

Makes about 3 dozen

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

A bad winter betide, if hair grows thick on the bear's hide.

When dry leaves rattle on the trees, expect snow.

Snow coming two or three days after the new Moon (Dec. 0) will remain on the ground some time, but that coming after the full Moon (Dec. 21) will go off soon.

The Building you want.
The Lease you need.

Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: Beginning costs as little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms start aggressively at five years but may be as long as ten, twelve, or fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules are specially designed to match your cash flow.

First: Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost.
Then: Call your Telmark representative for your financing.

Other Nonpoint Sources Of Pollution

The Susquehanna River Basin Commission monitors and submits an annual report on the water quality of the 83 interstate streams in the basin that flow across the New York, Pennsylvania, and Maryland State lines They assess compliance with state water quality standards, identify streams for reporting to the United States Environmental Protection Agency, and identify areas for restoration and protection, among other things.

In the latest report, the commission admits that the water quality in most interstate streams continues to meet designated use classes and water quality standards Of the 2,329 total observations, only 34 exceeded water quality standards. The parameter that most frequently exceeded water quality standards was total iron This is a metal most often associated with industrial waste not agriculture Even in the Pennsylvania-Maryland border streams where concentrated agriculture abounds, three streams were not impaired at all, six were only slightly impaired, and one was called moderately impaired and none in the severely impaired category

But the Commission still had to get in a disparaging remark about agriculture Elevated nutrient levels they said, in the Pennsylvania-Maryland border streams "possibly due to agricultural runoff" affected the water quality of streams in this region

We say, since the source of the nutrients is not known, it is "possibly due to the discharges from municipal sewage plants "

Overall, we're pleased the streams in the Susquehanna River Basin are improving in quality We know many farmers and agribusiness enterprises work hard to insure that agriculture does its part to keep the streams clean We can only hope the other nonpoint sources of pollution do the same and are taken to task it they don't

To Protect Venison Quality

Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, reports venison quality depends on how it is handled The deer hunter is the key person responsible for the quality of his venison Preserving the carcass quality starts with the right tools and an understanding of what to do

The best venison quality is obtained with proper field dressing Excessive blood should be removed along with the digestive tract and other internal organs while still in the field The body cavity should be washed as soon as possible with clean water.

Any organs to be kept should also be washed thoroughly Cool the carcass quickly and avoid transporting on the hood of a vehicle where it will warm up During warm weather, keeping the carcass cool is critical in avoiding meat spoilage

To Avoid Antifreeze Poisoning of Pets

Watch for spills of antifreeze anytime you check your car's radiator this fall, warns Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent Do not leave spills without cleaning them up Do not leave open containers of antifreeze sitting around that pets could drink from

Many pets may find water hard to get in the winter months or they may enjoy the sweet taste of antifreeze Ethylene glycol, the main ingredient in antifreeze, is very toxic to humans and pets when ingested Always clean up spills of antifreeze Antifreeze will not evaporate

Never leave old antifreeze sitting around in buckets or other containers pets could drink from Always keep antifreeze in original containers with the safety caps in place

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W ALTHOUSE

IS ABRAHAM ENOUGH?

December 5, 1999

Background Scripture:
Matthew 3
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 21:23-27

I have had more than one friend tell me that the thing that turns them off from Christianity is the call to repentance. "It's demeaning" one told me. "I would rather focus on God's image within me," said another. I can appreciate that their early experience of Christianity were weighted on the side of sin, guilt and repentance. Teaching and preaching that only emphasizes human depravity, I believe, presents a very one-sided gospel.

At the same time, to believe that human nature is essentially good with just an occasional mistake or failing is also woefully one-sided as well. My seminary professor, Reinhold Niebuhr said that "Few things are worthless as those for which people have not felt a need. This is particularly true of mercy; when we know we are in need of it, nothing is more precious; when we do not know we are in need of it, the offer of it may appear as the worst kind of insult." Many people do feel insulted by the call to repent. The very fact that they do not know they need to repent is proof of their need. It was Neibuhr who said, "...not much evil is done by evil men.. most of the evil is done by good people who do not know that they are not good."

Everybody?

The story of Jesus begins with John their Baptist's clarion call: "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand" Does that mean everybody? Yes, everybody. Without acknowledgment of our imperfection, our self-centeredness, our failures, we cannot enter the kingdom of heaven. Only the redeemed can enter and only those who repent can be redeemed. No one enters the kingdom because he or she qualifies; it is always a matter of grace

This, however, does not mean that we are to be obsessed with our sins Christianity offers the perfect way to be rid of sins· recognize, confess and accept forgiveness Then get on with your life, leaving behind all the stains and regrets that rob life of its vitality. Unfortunately, some would make a transaction out of this process; I sin, I say I repent, God forgives and I start over again. But John says that the repentance cannot be a ritual or device—it must be real. John warned the Pharisees and Sadducees: "Bear fruit that befits repentance" (3.8). Repentance that doesn't bear fruit, that does not issue in a better life is not repentance. Going through the motions is not enough.

Jesus would adopt this same rule-of-thumb In Matthew 7.20 he says, "By their fruits you shall know them." In John 15:16, he says to his disciples "I have chosen you, and ordained you, that you should go and bring forth fruit." And in John 15:8: "By this my Father is glorified, that you bear much fruit, and so prove to be my disciples."

Abraham's Children

Some of those who heard John's call to repentance were smug because they believed as sons of Abraham they did not need repentance. They belonged to the 'right' church and therefore they had nothing of which to repent. But John, knowing full well what they were thinking, says: "...and do not presume to say to yourselves, 'We have Abraham as our father'; for I tell you, God is able from these stones to raise up children to Abraham. Even now the axe is laid to the root of the trees; every tree therefore that does not bear good fruit is cut down and thrown into the fire" (3:9, 10).

The modern equivalent of having "Abraham as our father" is "But we are Methodists," "We are followers of Luther," "disciples of John Calvin," "Menno Simon," and you can fill in the rest. Maybe it is not a matter of our denomination, but our particular theological bent — liberal, conservative, neo-orthodox, biblical literalists, charismatics and so on. But both John and Jesus made it clear that labels counted for nothing. Only fruit.

PRO-LIX
LIQUID FEED

In the dairy business, income over feed cost is the name of the game Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements offer dairymen the means to maximize this value while getting the most from their cow's natural abilities

Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements are concentrated sources of just what ordinary feeds lack protein, energy, vitamins, minerals -- everything animals need for economical milk production and growth

For replacement heifers, Pro-Lix means faster maturity and assurance that they'll get to the milking herd on time If you trust your heifers to forage alone, they might not make it (Bouvatec Is Available)

For lactating cows, the nitrogen content of Pro-Lix means plenty of protein available for milk production and growth

Finally, for dry cows, Pro-Lix not only helps maintain their health during the dry period it prepares them for the next lactation. The Ca P ratio in Pro-Lix helps control milk fever, while the Vitamin E and selenium aids in clean-up after the birth of a calf

Best of all, Pro-Lix works with all types of pasture grass or forage, as a free-choice supplement, a top-dressing, or a ration mix

The payoff is healthier animals and economical production, all year round!

Forecast Of Pennsylvania Milk Prices Under Federal Order Reform

By Ken Bailey
Associate Professor
Penn State University

November 30, 1999

The National Milk Producers Federation announced November 19 that a year-end omnibus spending bill has been approved by the House and Senate President Clinton reportedly signed the budget bill Monday It contains dairy provisions that will amend the federal order reform process More specifically it will

- Require the USDA to use Option 1A Class I price differentials rather than Option 1B contained in the Secretary's final rule,
- Require USDA to hold hearings to determine the proper level of make allowances for cheese (Class III) and butter/powder (Class IV) processors The make allowance affects Class III and IV prices and hence the minimum prices that processors pay for milk,
- Establish a pilot program to allow farmers to forward price their milk in Classes II, III and IV,
- Extend the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact through September 20, 2001 Note that the bill does not allow for other states to join the existing compact

My contacts indicate that these changes will be added onto the final rule recently approved by dairy farmers and could be implemented as early as January 1, 2000 The budget bill reportedly contains language that will allow USDA to quickly implement these changes (i e no need for a hearing process, referendum, regulatory impact statement, etc)

I made two forecasts for milk prices in the Northeast one through 1999 using my BFP model, and the other for 2000 using my new federal order reform model Both models can be downloaded from my website http //www aers psu edu/dairyoutlook/excel htm These models use commodity forecasts in Table 1 below

The year 2000 forecast assumes Boston will be the basing point for the new Northeast order The Boston Class I differential will be $3.25 per cwt under modified Class IA It is currently $3 24. The Northeast blend price in Table 2 below is computed using the following utilization rates Class I = 41%, Class II = 19 %, Class III = 33%, and Class IV = 7%. The Northeast blend price is then adjusted to Lancaster, PA by subtracting $0.45 per cwt This adjustment reflects the difference in county Class I differentials under order reform as modified by the omnibus budget (Option 1A)

The model results in Table 2 suggest milk prices will decline sharply from record high levels in the fourth quarter of 1999 and the first quarter of 2000

SAFECIDE® BRAND IC

For the control of darkling beetles, hide beetles and flies in poultry houses and for control of fire ants

Advantages:

- Efficacious–boron-based SafeCide® Brand IC kills larvae and adults. Breaks the beetle life cycle and reduces diseases carried by beetles
- Contains an extremely safe and effective pest control agent (99% orthoboric acid)– larvae and beetles die 3 to 5 days after contact and ingestion.
- Provides long-lasting residual results. Keeps on working up to 12 months – longer than most available products.
- Provides an effective barrier. Kills larvae and adults as they emerge.
- Cost effective – low cost based on per day of activity.
- Can be applied as a dust or spray. Flexible application options let SafeCide® Brand IC fit easily into your particular management program.
- EPA approved, ecologically friendly– non-carcinogenic, no toxic residues. Safe to be applied by humans.
- Is field proven. Field studies* show heavily infested farms treated with SafeCide® Brand IC have better feed conversion rates, increased weight gains, greater livability, and fewer condemnations than untreated farms.
- No insecticidal resistance reported.
- Retards the growth of Aspergillus in the litter.
- Approved for use in the control of fire ants and flies.

Dover Ag Science Teacher Attends National Training Seminar

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

DOVER (York Co.) — Dover Area High School ag science teacher and FFA adviser Ronald Weaner was one of 17 agriculture teachers around the country selected to attend a national training seminar for applied environmental science.

Early this month, Weaner traveled to the airport in Dallas, Texas to participate in a national train-the-trainer environmental science workshop conducted by the National Council for Agricultural Education.

From Nov. 5-7, agricultural teachers from 16 states participated in activities and discussions related to ecology and natural resources at the eight-hour workshop. According to the council, the teachers examined how people interact with their environment, how plants and animals affect the environment, and the goal of environmental regulations.

After training, Weaner, selected at the state level by Pennsylvania's vocational education department, is certified to conduct applied environmental science training workshops for local agriculture and science teachers in Pennsylvania.

The project was directed by Dr. Robert Birkenholz and Dr. Bryan Garton, professors of agricultural education at the University of Missouri.

According to Weaner, the applied environmental sciences curriculum is used in schools. The seminar provided useful classroom materials, including overheads and handouts, on water quality studies, soil nutrient management, soil science, and other items useful for teachers.

At Dover, Weaner teaches ninth grade ag science technology, ag mechanics from 10-12th grade, and wildlife management and natural resources conservation.

By attending the Dallas conference, Weaner will be presenting the curriculum program he learned to the Pennsylvania agriculture teachers conference scheduled July 10-13 in Shippensburg. The conference is conducted at a Shippensburg hotel by ag teachers in Adams and Cumberland counties.

As for the information, "I plan to use quite a bit of it," he said. "It contains some new resources for us."

The program was also a cultural exchange, of sorts, Weaner noted. His roommate at the seminar was an ag teacher from Gillette, Wyo. — and someone who never visited states in the East.

For a person from Wyoming who knows little about the East, the differences are notable. It would be like living in China and coming to America for the first time, according to Weaner.

But the work presented will make the job of "putting lessons together a little bit easier," said Weaner.

Applied environmental science instructional materials are delivered to teachers across the nation by the council in partnership with the National Association of Agricultural Educators. The council provides leadership, coordination, and support for the continuous improvement and diversity of agricultural education.

New Bolton Center Offers Virus Advice

Dr Jon Palmer, Veterinary Infectious Disease Specialist at New Bolton Center, University of Pennsylvania's School of Veterinary Medicine, asks member of the equine community to be aware of the simple precau tionary steps that can be taken to reduce exposure to the mosquito-borne West Nile Virus

West Nile Virus causes encephalitis, or inflammation of the brain. It is transmitted by mosquitoes from birds, not by animal-to-animal, or animal-to-person contact. The incubation period is 1 to 2 weeks, and signs in horses include a mild flu-like syndrome (depression, listlessness and sometimes fever) or more serious neurolgic signs such as weakness, incoordination (stumbling), circling, hyperexcitability, convulsions, paralysis, coma, or even death.

There is no vaccine to prevent West Nile Virus Although there is no specific medication or treatment for the disease, the signs can be treated by your veterinarian to help the horse through the problem Horses are considered "terminal hosts" which means that they are not a source of infection or other horses or people. It is highly unlikely that a mosquito feeding on an infected horse could ingest enough of the virus to transmit it to other animals. Thus, it is not necessary to quarantine an infected horse or a farm where infection has occurred and unlike Equine Infectious Anemia (EIA, Swamp Fever), it is not necessary to euthanize infected horses. In outbreaks which have occurred in the Mediterranean basin about half of the horses with serious disease have recovered and have posed no risk to other horses.

You can decrease the chances of exposure to the virus by preventing or limiting your animal's exposure to mosquitoes. Horses should be stabled inside from dusk to dawn, and incect repellents should be used until there is a killing frost (These precautions may or may not be nesessary in the spring.)

two-thirds of the farm. The orchard includes two acres of pears and a small parcel, the "garden plot," planted with pumpkins and gourds. The Roths also grow some tomatoes for the market. They raise tart cherries for the Peanut Bar Restaurant (about 700-800 pounds per year).

Leslie, who married Alan about five years ago, grew up in Grosse Point, Mich., and received a bachelor's degree in liberal arts from the University of Arizona. She began her career as a women's sportswear buyer for a large department store in Phoenix.

Alan grew up in Hessian Camp and is a graduate of Reading High School. He attended Penn State and studied landscape architecture and parks and recreation.

At 26 years old in 1976, Alan purchased the farm, owned years ago by the Aulenbach family. The farm went through several owners. The farm, known previously as the Shoenley Farm, was renamed Angora Farm after their road address.

According to Alan, the farm name originated with the history of the hill. Located near the Pagoda, the farm site was cleared for lumber in about 1880 and goats were raised. Angora was the breed of goat favored by many farmers — thus the road's name.

Alan and Leslie sell the apples they raise at the farm at the farm store and through a buyer, Calvin Beekman, Boyertown, who sells to Mott's Apples in Biglerville. Some apples, which the Roths start selling at the farm market on Labor Day, are shipped to Panama. Normally, some of the fruit is delivered to Leola, Kutztown, or Weaverland auctions — except this year, a setback for Alan.

On July 27, Alan, who works in the steel mill owned by Carpenter Technology, Reading, was the victim of an accident in the annealing department. Alan's right leg was hit from behind, snapping it in half. He said he didn't know it was broken until he looked down and saw the awkward angle of the foot and felt like it was disattached.

"I got real sick right then," he said, but managed to keep his spirits up.

Alan's had to wear a cast and recently went in for corrective surgery. He uses crutches but manages to make the best of his situation, helping at the farm where he can.

Alan said the twins, Timothy, 13, and sister Molly, were a great help. The twins are seventh graders at Wyomissing Junior-Senior High School.

To a certain extent, even though they are "city slickers," said Leslie, the twins help when and where they can, on time off from school activities.

Alan's biggest worry, he said, was "about the season — how was I going to get the work done?"

Fortunately friends and customers donated their time and energy to helping the family endure a year filled with uncertainty.

Though the farm did "really well with melons this year," irrigation during the summer drought was key.

"We had lines running everywhere," said Alan, from two hand-dug farm ponds, drawing about a million gallons altogether. Fortunately the spring-supplied ponds became low but never dried up all summer long.

Then, with Hurricane Floyd, about 20 fruit trees were lost. Countless other trees were wind-damaged. There was minor flooding that damaged the farm lane. As soon as Alan can walk without crutches, he's vowed to repair it.

The farm is constant prey to deer damage. The bucks love to rub their horns on young tree stock. In 1989 Roth installed a Penn State Electric 7-wire high tensile fence, mounted on five-foot posts, which proved 97 percent effective against stopping deer. In 1994, however, the large snow and ice cover allowed the deer to "hope right over," he said.

For Leslie, a challenge is learning to live in an industry that is completely weather dependent. "Our whole life depends on the weather," she said.

The area newspapers, she said, were warning people to stay out of the hot sun. As a result, the farm market lost lots of business.

August was the most intense time, Alan noted, and is the busiest of the year. Peaches, nectarines, and plums are harvested to sell at the farm market.

Farm market customers wonder about where the Roths get the fruit, and Alan suspects why. He said that one of the nectarine varieties produces such a large-sized fruit that, to them, he said, "it looks like it comes from California."

This year the weather was so dry there were brush fires started by arsonists on the Reading hill. The fires were a constant worry.

The Roths have worked closely with Rothenberger's Dutch Market. They supply the market with fruit and, in return, receive field produce, including sweet corn.

About 90 percent of the customers at Angora are senior citizens, according to Leslie. She said that many have the time to travel a few miles from Reading and "some have a lot of money to spend," she said. "They were brought up

(Turn to Page A30)

New Program Will Help Beef, Dairy Producers Monitor Johne's Disease

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A new three-stage program to help beef and dairy cattle producers control Johne's Disease within their herds has been developed jointly by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Johne's Disease (pronounced yo-knees) is a bacterial disease of cattle and other ruminants (sheep, deer, goats) that is related to the bacterium causing tuberculosis. The chronic disease has a long incubation period — from one to five years — before signs of infection are obvious. Symptoms include weight loss, diarrhea and decreased milk production in dairy cattle.

"Once cattle contract the disease, it's incurable," said Larry Hutchinson, professor of veterinary science. "It's estimated that between 20 and 40 percent of the dairy herds in Pennsylvania have cattle with Johne's Disease."

"Beef cattle have it as well, but at a lower frequency," said David Wolfgang, senior research associate in veterinary science. "Dairy herds are housed and managed in much closer proximity than beef cattle, which makes it easier for the Johne's Disease pathogen to spread."

Hutchinson said the Pennsylvania Johne's Disease Program is a voluntary management tool that can help dairy producers identify whether their herds are infected and control or eliminate the disease. "If a producer does nothing to prevent the spread of Johne's Disease, the dairy operation will eventually decline in production," Wolfgang said. "There also may be other economic consequences, such as a lower price for culled cows and a decline in fertility."

The first step in the state program is the "30 Free" test. Producers can test any 30 adult animals in their herd for the disease with no laboratory fee for the test. Hutchinson said veterinarians will charge a fee for drawing blood samples.

"The test program does not obligate producers to do anything if their herd has animals with the disease," Hutchinson said. "Testing 30 animals will give large and small operations an idea of disease prevalence in the herd."

If testing proves the herd is not infected or is of low prevalence, producers can enlist in the Voluntary Johne's Disease Status Program. This stage of the program features four herd health levels that producers can use to keep their herds disease-free.

"Producers can choose to move up to different levels or maintain their status in the same level," Hutchinson explained. "It depends on the economic and management goals of the farmer. If you have a small operation and market embryos or bulls, you may want to move up your status. If you have a large operation and buy new cows, then you probably would prefer to maintain or improve status gradually."

The first level of the status program is the "30 Free" Test Program. The second level centers on more targeted testing for the herd, including all adult cows. The testing fees are reduced as long as farmers participate in the program.

The third level of the program tests more cows and uses a more accurate fecal culture test. In the fourth level, herds that test free of Johne's Disease are certified, and producers return to periodic blood tests.

If producers have infected herds, they can enter the Voluntary Johne's Disease Management Program, in conjunction with their veterinarians. The producer and veterinarian are required to write a herd management plan and meet goals to improve herd health.

"This program is completely voluntary and does not have strict timetables to cull infected animals or eradicate the disease if your herd is infected," Hutchinson said.

Wolfgang said the most important part of the program is writing and following a management plan in which the producer and veterinarian assess management areas to determine where the herd is most at risk for infection.

"The management plan will identify areas of greatest risk of disease transmission. The producer and veterinarian will work to reduce transmission in those locations at a pace comfortable to the farmer," Wolfgang said.

Penn State's role in the program is to provide educational materials for farmers and veterinarians and to provide training for both veterinarians and industry professionals.

Hutchinson said farmers and other interested professionals can get educational material and information on the Johne's Disease program at all Penn State Cooperative Extension county offices.

USDA Updates Addresses

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA is publishing a revised list of state beef councils authorized to receive assessments for the Cattlemen's Beef Promotion and Research Board.

Under provisions of the Beef Promotion and Research Order, cattle buyers must collect $1-per-head assessments from U.S. producers selling cattle. Buyers then pay the assessments to Qualified State Beef Councils (QSBCs). These organizations, in turn, pay a portion of the assessments to the national board.

Forty-five state beef councils have been certified by the national board to receive the assessments. States without QSBCs pay assessments directly to the national board. The assessments fund programs of the national board and the state beef councils.

The updated list of councils and their addresses are scheduled to appear in the Nov. 2 Federal Register. Copies are available from Ralph L. Tapp, Chief; Marketing Programs Branch, Room 2627-S; Livestock and Seed Program, AMS, USDA; STOP 0251; 1400 Independence Avenue, SW.; Washington, D.C. 20250-0251, telephone number (202) 720-1115.

Andersons' Focus Is On Cows

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

EAST PROSPECT (York Co.) — Before starting his own farm in 1994, York County dairyman Glenn Anderson worked for several other operations.

I learned a lot everywhere I worked," he said of that background of diverse methods which gave him the foundation for his own successful dairy farm.

But it was with the Maryland herd of Dave Weitzer, for whom he worked four years as herdsman, that Anderson really discovered his talents for managing cows for production. During his tenure there, the Weitzer rolling herd average increased from 19,000 to 23,000, while expanding from 60 to 80 head.

Glenn and his wife, Dawn, own and operate Chosen Whey dairy farm in eastern York County. Their East Prospect operation's 40 acres are devoted to pasture, with 90-plus head in the milking string.

Having insufficient acreage to grow their forages or grain, the Andersons instead concentrate on a high production herd managed with purchased feedstuffs.

That has proven to be a wise game plan; their current RHA tops 25,000 on 2X milking, with an average daily per cow production of 88 pounds.

Not bad for a young man who as a teen-ager, having grown up on a family dairy farm, decided he did not want to be in his own dairy business as a career.

A portion of the Anderson herd traces to their time at the Weitzer farm, where Glenn acquired several heifer calves each year. With start-up financing from the Farmers' Home Administration, the Andersons purchased their 80-stall-barn operation, then owning seven milking cows and 21 heifers.

Three Holstein herds were purchased of 36 head each, one from New York state, and the York County herds of Bob Stewart, Airville, and Bob Charles, Dover.

Many of those animals, and direct descendants, remain in the herd today. But the Andersons have since added diversity to their herd with Glenn's favored Brown Swiss, several Ayrshires, and a number of offspring from a Linedback which he purchased after she had experienced breeding problems for her previous owner. Now 9 years old, she is still in the herd, completing a lactation last year of 32,000 pounds milk.

One of the Swiss animals, however, outproduced her, with a 35,000-pound record. Several Swiss X Holstein crossbreds are also part of the herd.

"We don't raise any crops," Anderson adamantly said, instead utilizing a very basic Total Mixed Ration balanced for 90 pounds and fed three time daily.

"We buy all our feed; it was the only way we could cash flow. The farm with small acreage was half the price of lots ot crop ground and offered more cow space than some. So we focused on the cows."

The triple-feeding schedule is a more recent fine-tuning, a management change which has worked well, even though it takes some added time.

"By the time cows are finished eating, they usually have some water spilled into the feed and then don't want to eat it. This way, they get less, but fresh, feed more frequently, and clean it up better. It's a little more labor, but it seems to be working," he said.

"And, it's better than milking three times a day," he chuckled, having attempted 3X some time ago, then abandoning it due to the sheer physical stress and fatigue. "When you sit down, then stand up in the barn, and don't know where you are, it's time to change something."

Anderson favors large cows, with good udders, legs and feet, animals with the physical foundation to produce to the capacity for which he manages them.

"If a heifer doesn't have a good udder, she won't last in the herd," is his philosophy. So size, type and udders are among his top priorities when selecting sires. And while the Andersons once sold all their calves and purchased replacements, due to limited young stock facilities, they now raise their own.

"My heifers might take a little longer to get in the milk string, but they milk better," he said of his aim to homegrow replacements big, framey and durable. The method seems to be working, with some high-producing heifers peaking at 120 pounds.

Anderson is generally pleased with his herd's response to some bovine somatotropin (BST) use, on selected animals and only after they are bred back.

"It enhances any problem that might be there otherwise," he said, explaining why he avoids its use on cows with foot or leg problems, or udder edema. "You don't want to add any more stress to a high-producing cow. And our older cows never get it; a 9- or 10-year-old cow still in the herd has already worked hard enought in her life."

One management decision Anderson is quick to credit with enhancing herd population is the hiring two years ago of the feed consulting services of Berks County dairyman, Tim Kissling.

"Tim has his own herd of cows, so he knows what works and what doesn't. He doesn't recommend a lot of expensive extras," Anderson said. "We knew they could do better than they were at the time. The herd went up 20 pounds per cow after we started with his recommendations."

The cornsilage, hay and complete mix TMR is "as simple as we can keep it" for consistency. By locking in his feed prices up to a year in advance, Anderson has a clear handle on his ration costs for cash flow planning.

Although Dawn, also a York Countian, did not grow up on a farm, she works side by side with him in the dairy operation, while also looking after their household and daughters.

They met through Glenn's aunt, with whom Dawn was working at the time. Though Glenn was then employed on a Bradford County farm, the couple dated by "commuting" between York and Bradford counties. After several months of those travels, they chose to get married in August of 1989.

Their family includes Dawn's daughter, Danielle, 15, Glenn's daughter, Faith, 11, and their own two daughters Sadye, 8, and Wren, 6.

"The girls all help out," Anderson said of their children, adding that Sadye especially takes an interest when their vet is working with cows on herd checks and health management.

With their last farm mortgage payment only a few years in the future, the Andersons are looking ahead to possible expansion someday to more cows, incorporated in a freestall-housing and milking parlor setup. That is a prime goal, but only so long as they can expand without reliance on much outside labor.

"We don't pay labor," Anderson said, "and last year we shipped two million pounds of milk."

After five years in business, a RHA of 25,000-plus pounds of milk, and a mortgage end in sight, it's a business plan that seems to be working well at Chosen Whey iry.

High Milk Award for Lancaster County in 1996 as well as placing first in the Herd Management Award the same year.

Individual cow records and somatic cell, along with the breeding records are used extensively in managing the Newswanger herd. Milk Urea Nitrogen (MUN) levels maintained an 11 mg/dl average over the past year. The herd average of 26,657 of milk with 835 lbs. of protein and 996 lbs. of fat is evidence that Lester takes record keeping seriously and all of this is accomplished on a 2X milking schedule. Currently, there are 50 acres on the farm that are being utilized for corn and alfalfa along with another 4 rented acres. Total mixed rations are being fed under the supervision of Sam Oberholtzer of Sensenig Feed Mill.

At the banquet, the Public Relations in Agriculture Award went to the board of county commissioners, presented to Glenn Reber, chair, Randy Pyle, and Mark Scott.

This year the commissioners took a major step in the preservation of farmland through the purchase of a $30.5 million bond to purchase conservation easements. Combined with matching state funds, the money will save about 400 farms and approximately 50,000 acres.

A second Public Relations in Agriculture Award went to Clover Farms Dairy. The dairy, founded in 1937, is a family-owned, second-generation business. Clover Farms delivers fresh products to more than 1,000 retail outlets within a 150-mile radius of Reading.

Another Public Relations in Agriculture Award was presented to Jack Schonely, who served as the district manager for Berks County Conservation District for the past 14 years. A graduate of Boyertown School District, Schonely received his bachelor's degree in ag education from Penn State. He was an agriculture teacher for five years at Kutztown High School and for 20 years was an insurance agent in the Kutztown area. Jack and wife Ellie have retired to North Carolina.

The Woman In Agriculture Award was presented to Susanne Sharadin. Sharadin, who received a bachelor's degree in business administration and marketing from Kutztown University and a master's degree in environmental resource management and administration from Antioch University in New Hampshire, directs the work of the Berks County Land Preservation Board.

Sharadin's family home is a century farm in Wyoming County. Today she resides outside of Kutztown with husband Steve on a farm in Steve's family for three generations. Sharadin was honored for her role in land preservation efforts.

spending money on food."

Many tourists visiting the Pagoda, a Reading landmark and tourist attraction, also visit the farm to have their picture taken in the orchard.

Alan noted that he uses a standard 10-10-10 fertilizer application for the trees when the busy spring season begins. He is careful to follow below-label rate recommendations and a closely managed integrated pest management program. Alan works with an orchard consultant, Ron Serfaus, Quakertown.

When customers arrive at the stand, sometimes they are greeted by the Roth's two German Shepherds, sisters Sabrina and Daisy. The Roths also care for a black labrador, Jeannie.

Alan noted that customer loyalty is key. To keep the loyalty, the Roths will often extend credit to customers.

"We have worked hard to get it," said Leslie.

To stay in business, the farm market remains competitive. As a result, the Roths sell other items at the stand in addition to fruit. Pennsylvania Dutch items are popular (including chow chow and red beets) and baked goods, such as dumplings, cookies, and pies.

Alan noted that the baker, Susie DeSantis, makes a great shoe fly "cookie" similar to the wet-bottom shoe fly pie.

Leslie said that she was bottling jellies, which sold well, for a while until the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture visited her. A department representative told her she couldn't sell the jellies anymore until they were properly labeled.

During the off season, from December through May, the Roths vacation to Florida, a favorite destination, or Arizona and Colorado.

As to whether Alan will recover in time for hunting season, which he loves, he said, "I have to. I love to hunt."

Alan enjoys buck and bear hunting and keeps many trophies.

The farm is open from mid-June until about Thanksgiving. They operate from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Thursday through Monday. For more information, call them at (610) 921-3870.

Crop Insurance Videoconference Looks At Changes For 2000

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The drought of 1999 makes crop insurance a hot topic, and a videoconference from Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences will help agricultural producers around the state to get answers to many of their risk management questions.

"Pennsylvania Crop Insurance: What's New for the Year 2000" will be available via satellite from 7 p.m. until 9:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 9. The event is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension in cooperation with the USDA and Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

The purpose of the videoconference, according to Jayson Harper, associate professor of agricultural economics, is to help farmers understand how crop insurance works in Pennsylvania.

"This summer's drought has many producers looking for ways to reduce risk on their farms," Harper said. "The videoconference will cover risk management options for farmers and will show why crop insurance is an important consideration in any producer's risk management planning. It will look at the different kinds of crop insurance products available and how Pennsylvania producers can use them effectively."

Harper said that, while crop insurance is far from new, it traditionally hasn't been popular in Pennsylvania, a state where operations are smaller and more diversified. But changes in the crop insurance program and in the products available are making insurance a better risk management option for farmers.

John Berry, Penn State Cooperative Extension agent for Lehigh County, will moderate the videoconference and present an overview of the state's crop insurance climate. Harper will look at overall risk management issues and address the effectiveness of crop insurance in protecting farmers against yield losses. Cliff Parker, chief underwriter for the regional office of USDA's Risk Management Agency, will contrast conventional crop insurances with newer product options.

Gene Gantz, president of Ag Risk Strategies Inc., will join Berry to present an update of pending federal and state crop insurance legislation. Gantz also will provide side-by-side performance comparisons of risk management products, using worksheets and sample problems. The panel also will discuss the USDA's new Crop Revenue Program and catastrophic insurance options. Audience members will be able to call a toll-free telephone number to ask questions of the studio panelists.

The videoconference is free to attend, but advance registration may be required at some sites. For the nearest downlink site, contact the Penn State Cooperative Extension office in your county. Home satellite dish owners can contact the office for direction and assistance in downlinking the event. Test patterns will begin at 6:45 p.m., followed by a 7 p.m. broadcast on satellite SBS-6, Transponder 2 (frequency 11749, polarity: V, orbit: 74 W).

Management Handbook Available

ITHACA, N.Y. — Waste management has been a concern in poultry operations for many years. Problems with storing, handling, managing, and utilizing the byproducts of production have come to the forefront in planning, establishing, and operating poultry farms.

Poultry growers have become sensitive to potential nuisance litigation should their farms generate odors, problems with insects and vermin, leachate, or runoff that offends neighbors and poses a risk to the environment.

A new book published by the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service (NRAES) was written to aid growers and their advisors in designing and implementing effective waste management plans for poultry operations The "Poultry Waste Management Handbook" ($16 plus S&H/sales tax, 72 pages, September 1999) covers all aspects of solid, semi-solid, and liquid poultry waste management — from manure production to utilization The publication will be a valuable resource for producers, cooperative extension educators, manure management consultants, regulatory agencies, and soil and water conservation district staff

The "Poultry Waste Management Handbook" contains nine chapters that cover the following topics manure production and characteristics, environmental regulations and hazards, poultry housing and waste management, manure storage within and outside of the poultry house (including solids systems and liquid, slurry, and semi-solid systems); waste treatment and utilization (such as composting, anaerobic lagoons, aerobic digestion, and direct incineration); nutrient management; application equipment (from solids handling equipment to irrigation systems); dead bird management (rendering, composting, and incineration); and alternative uses for manure.

The nutrient management chapter explains the steps involved in developing a nutrient management plan and contains worksheets for estimating nitrogen availability and application rates. The chapter on application equipment reviews equations and procedures for calibrating various types of equipment.

The "Poultry Waste Management Handbook" was written by Eldridge R. Collins, Jr. professor and extension agricultural engineer, Department of Biological Systems Engineering, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University; James C. Barker, professor and extension specialist, Department of Biological and Agricultural Engineering, North Carolina State University; Lewis E. Carr, Ph.D., instructor–agricultural engineering, Department of Biological Resources Engineering, University of Maryland at College Park; Herbert L. Brodie, professor emeritus, Department of Biological Resources Engineering, University of Maryland at College Park; and John H. Martin, Jr. former associate professor, Department of Animal and Food Sciences, University of Delaware.

The "Poultry Waste Management Handbook" NRAES–132, is available for $16 per copy plus shipping and handling from NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701. Shipping and handling for one copy is $3.75 within the continental United States. New York State residents, add 8 percent sales tax (calculated on both the cost of publications and the shipping and handling charges).

Senate Bill No. 5 - Lawsuit Abuse Reform Act & The Affect on Agriculture

The passage of Senate Bill 5, introduced by Senator Bob Thompson in March of 1999, will have a positive affect on reforming lawsuit abuse in the agriculture industry. Senator Noah Wenger and Senator Gib Armstrong from Lancaster County are both co-sponsors of this bill. John Bell from the PA Farm Bureau believes that agriculture would take a step in the right direction in lowering punitive damages and limiting joint and several liabilities if this bill is passed

The rising costs of farming can be, in part, contributed directly to lawsuit abuse. As farms continually struggle to manage their finances, a particular problem is purchasing new machinery. In order for the equipment manufacturer to protect themselves from lawsuits, many new safety features must be added to equipment, which in turn increases the price for the farmer. Other ag-inputs that have experienced significant price increases due to lawsuit abuse include fertilizers, pesticides, veterinary medicines and many other products that help contribute to the success of a farming operation The passage of this bill will help to reduce the costs of farm inputs, by allowing companies to avoid unnecessary safety measures.

The research and development of new products to enhance the quantity and quality of farm production is drastically discouraged due to lawsuit abuse.

Many of the companies that are capable of producing new chemicals, vaccines, and biotechnological improvements to help farmers overcome the many potential diseases, viruses, and pests which threaten herds, flocks and crops are far less willing to explore these markets due to the likelihood of facing thousands of frivolous claims of "illness" and "injury "

Farming encompasses relatively large amounts of acreage, which currently can also be a risk to the farmer when a trespasser enters their property This trespasser could be a hunter or an ATV driver, who may be injured while on the farmer's property. Currently, this person may sue the landowner even though he was on the property without permission. This bill would help limit the amount the farmer or landowner would be held liable for in such a claim.

Rising costs for liability insurance and limitations on insurance coverage are two other facets of lawsuit abuse In the past few years, farmers have experienced large increases in premiums for liability insurance coverage and have also been unable to receive coverage in areas that were previously covered.

The passage of Senate Bill 5 depends on a concerted grass-roots effort We urge the agricultural community to write letters to their senator, encouraging them to vote for the passage of the bill. Reducing frivolous lawsuits is important to restoring the health of the agricultural economy and the general welfare of all Pennsylvanians.

Gov. Pataki Keynote Speaker

ALBANY, N.Y. — Delegates from the 52 county farm bureaus of New York State will convene in early December to formulate the legislative policy of New York Farm Bureau for the year 2000.

The delegate session, always a major portion of the state organization's annual meeting, is scheduled Dec. 7-9 at the Crown Plaza Hotel in Albany.

This is the first time the New York Farm Bureau has conducted an annual meeting in the city where it focuses a great deal of its attention. Marking this important event will be a keynote address from New York State Governor George Pataki.

The voting delegates will discuss and address hundreds of legislative issues confronting the agricultural industry in New York State. Many legislators and key government officials who look to New York Farm Bureau for legislative direction in the field of agriculture will be monitoring the organization's legislative decisions. Delegates will discuss agriculture labor, dairy, the Food Quality Protection Act, food security and safety, world trade issues, and many other topics of concern to New York's farmers.

As keynote speaker at the Annual New York Farm Bureau Banquet Wednesday evening, New York Governor George Pataki is quite familiar with agriculture. Born and raised on the family farm in Peekskill, Gov. Pataki has shown firm leadership and commitment to the agriculture community in New York, most evident recently in his support of the state's effort to join the New England dairy Compact. Gerald Jennings, now serving his second four-year term as the 74th Mayor of the City of Albany, will give opening remarks as the New York Farm Bureau delegates convene their last meeting of the century Tuesday, Dec. 7.

Addressing the closing luncheon will be the commissioner for the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets, Nathan Rudgers

Farm Woodlot Often Overlooked Asset

Kenneth L. Balliet
Agribusiness Agent
Snyder County

According to recent land ownership surveys, farm woodlots account for more than 15 percent of the total wooded acres owned in Pennsylvania.

In addition, private forest landowners, other than farmers, own another 60 percent of the forested acres. You may be surprised that clearly 75 percent of the timberland in the state is owned by private individuals!

The Hardwood Lumber Manufacturers Association of Pennsylvania estimates that timber stumpage (the value of standing trees) paid to all landowners in the state tops $200 million each year. If you figure that about 15 percent of the forestland is owned by farmers, that means that approximately $30 million in stumpage is paid to farmers like you!

However, few farmers know the value of their timber or list timber values on their asset inventory or balance sheet. Fewer still actively manage their resource to meet their needs. Typically, until someone offers to purchase the timber, farm woodlots are usually ignored. The result is lost financial opportunities and reduced timber value due to poor management.

In order to manage your timber for economic advantage, you'll need a reliable estimate of how much timber you have and what its worth. The size, quality, and species of the trees all have a tremendous impact on the value of your stumpage. Because of the large number of trees per acre, it's virtually impossible for anyone to simply walk through a woodlot and estimate its value with any degree of certainty.

A private consulting forester can perform an inventory and appraisal to establish timber values with a great degree of accuracy. Although consultants need to charge a fee for this service, there are several important reasons why you need to have a consulting forester give you an appraisal on your woodlot.

First, even small tracts of timber can be worth a great deal of money and timber value can be used as an asset when buying real estate. Many buyers overlook the value of the timber when negotiating a price for a farm, and are therefore at a severe disadvantage. In many such transactions, an accurate appraisal can make you money.

A recent timber appraisal can also be a positive influence when applying for an operating loan. Lenders vary on how they treat timber assets because timber can be removed from the farm without the lenders knowledge. A great deal depends on your relationship with your lender. However, timber assets can usually help, especially in marginal situations. Lenders will insist on an unbiased appraisal of the timber that meets professional standards. Remember that even small acreage's can have significant timber value.

Second, a consulting forester can help you manage the woodlot to maximize the benefits to you. For example, a well-planned harvest can actually improve the value of your woodlot, minimize taxes, provide cash for your children's college education, or fund your retirement. Failure to consider timber value when you plan your estate could result in a large increase in tax liability. A consulting forester can help you with many important decisions that may mean more benefits, and better production from your woodlot.

What's the next step? Contact Penn State Cooperative Extension or your local district office of the Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, Bureau of Forestry. The Service Forester assigned to your region will be happy to meet with you to inspect your timber. Many times the Service Forester can tell if the timber has any value, or if it is still very immature. The Service Forester can give you a list of private consulting foresters who, for a fee, can inventory your woodlot and give you a professional appraisal of the timber value.

Keep in mind that there is no forester licensing or registration law in Pennsylvania to protect landowners. Check credentials and references of any "forester" carefully to be sure they are reputable and qualified to do the work you require.

to support show and sale expenses.

Three additional buyers donated the cake back to the Beef Club. The buyers included Frantz Plumbing, Robert King and Hickory Bridge Farm Restaurant. The annual wooden clock was purchased by George Wildasin C.C. Inc. Monies from the sale of the cake and clock will be applied to the expenses of the show and sale.

Hoss's Steak and Sea House donated the champion steer back to the Beef club to resell with all monies applied to the Beef Club Scholarship Fund.

Missy Jeffcoat exhibited the reserve grand champion steer. The steer was purchased by Jim Reichart, Ag Com and Deb Jeffcoat, Reichart's Custom Slaughter Shop, for $1.40 per pound.

Wide Awake Farm Is Environmentally Wide Awake

They have a nutrient management plan in place and this plan dictates low manure application rates They never have experienced runoff from the farm

The farm is credited as Purina's top producing sow herd in the North Atlantic area As of mid-year 1999, pigs weaned/crate/year stands at 142.8 pigs weaned Pigs weaned/mated female/year /year is 24 3, and pigs weaned/litter is 10 1 The farm is on track to wean 27,610 pigs in 1999.

Wide Awake Farm served as a state pilot farm for the National Pork Producers Council's (NPPC) on-farm odor/environmental assistance program monitored by Ken Kephart and Bob Mikesell of Penn State University Meinen and his co-workers became convinced that paying attention to detail also helps reduce odor

Having qualified for NPPC's Environmental Assurance Program for the last two years has given Meinen the reason to develop three record books to help monitor environmental situations--one for the lagoon, one for records of water usage and one for the isolation building. The results of these record books become a weekly production update Another form is completed monthly that notes animal inventories, monthly rainfall, present and past lagoon depth, freeboard depth, and liner and fence integrity It also includes results from the leak detector and confirms that no wet spots, sunken areas, bank erosion, excess vegetation or animal damage have occurred on the lagoon banks

Quality Variations Can Exist In Purchased Hay

Dr. Marvin H. Hall
Associate Professor
Forage Management
Penn State

With the drought this past summer, Pennsylvania farmers are purchasing an unusual amount of hay from other states.

Recently I have been receiving reports about hay that was sold over the phone or Internet as a certain quality, but farmers didn't test that quality when it was delivered. Assuming that the hay seller is trustworthy, then how can these differences occur?

More than likely because the sample submitted to the forage lab by the seller and the buyer were not the same! Since sample collection is highly variability (higher standard error), it is the limiting factor in the ability any lab to produce identical quality results for samples collected from the same load of hay (Table 1).

The highest level of accuracy we can expect from a single sample is plus or minus 1.58, 2.45, and 4.25 percentage units for CP, ADF, and NDF, respectively. This degree of accuracy is due to the inability to obtain a sample that truly represents the load of hay that the sample is collected from.

The large variations associated with sample collection can be the result of too few cores, by either the seller or buyer, being taken to produce a representative sample (Table 2). In general, 5 cores for every ton of hay on the truck load should be collected with and minimum of 10 cores per load. Note that just taking the second core sample nearly doubles the accuracy in measuring CP, ADF, and NDF.

Table 2. Variation (standard error) in quality of 2 ton hay loads based on number of cores taken.

Cores	Crude Protein	ADF	NDF
1	1 6	2.5	4.3
2	0 8	1.2	2 1
10	0 6	1 0	1 6
15	0.5	0.9	1 4
20	0 5	0 8	1 3

Another possible reason for the variations associated with sample collection is that different coring devices maybe used by the seller and buyer. Differences in a coring device's ability to representatively collect both leaves and stem can add to the variability in quality results.

So how can forage quality results be different for the same truckload of hay? More than likely because the samples collected from the load were not the same!

Since variability of sample collection is so much higher than variability of forage quality labs (Table 3), sample collection is the limiting factor in the ability any lab to produce identical quality results for samples collected from the same load of hay. Improving the precision of lab analysis is mainly academic because errors in sample collection will mask any improvement in analysis.

Table 3 Laboratory variability (standard error) associated with forage quality analysis

Quality factor	Standard error
Crude protein	0.53
Acid detergent fiber	0.73
Neutral detergent fiber	0.85

Table 1 Variation (standard error) associated with sample collection

Quality factor	Standard error
Crude protein	1 58
Acid detergent fiber	2 45
Neutral detergent fiber	4 25

Slayton Named Pa. Beef Council Executive Director

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — A nationally recognized cattle producer has been named executive director of the Pennsylvania Beef Council. Paul Slayton, a Bedford County cattle breeder, producer and judge assumed executive director responsibilities earlier this month.

Slayton brings a wide variety of experiences to the post. He is a producer of national and regional cattle champions, livestock judge for national and regional competitions, and was a manager of an international breed journal and worked in a number of support positions for producers and breed organizers.

He has owned and operated Slayton's Beardance, a purebred Angus and Polled Hereford beef cattle operation near Bedford for the past decade. Slayton will continue his involvement with the 260-acre grassland farm on a part-time basis.

"The opportunity to help promote our industry through the Beef Council is an exciting challenge," Slayton said. "The Council is a unique organization – one that is producer directed but consumer focused. We have the ability to help producers meet consumer needs and help consumers learn more about our great product. I'm looking forward to working with all sides of the industry."

The Pennsylvania Beef Council is supported by the national $1 per-head beef check off and seeks to build demand for beef through promotion, research and education.

Seminar To Help Smooth Transition Of Family Farm

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Transferring a family business from one generation to the next can be a frustrating chore. For family farms, the transition is often even more difficult.

"Often times farm estates can be quite large with a lot of real estate that has appreciated greatly, so there are more challenges involved," said Howard Siegrist, agriculture and natural resources and community development agent at the Licking County office of Ohio State University Extension. "A lot of long-range planning is needed to arrange for a successful transfer of the family farm business to the next generation."

To help Ohio farm families better prepare for the transfer of the family business, Ohio State University Extension, Farm Credit Services and Ohio's Country Journal are sponsoring the Family/Business Transition Seminar on Dec. 16 at the Ohio State University/Central Ohio Technical College, Newark Campus.

There are many legal challenges and decisions to make when transferring a family farm, Siegrist said.

"There are a variety of transition approaches to choose from and hopefully this seminar will help people select the approach that is most beneficial for their business," he said. "It should help participants see the many dynamics of the process, give them some ideas that may help chart their course and help them save some money through financial planning."

The seminar will feature David Kohl, professor of agricultural finance and small business management and entrepreneurship at Virginia Tech University. Kohl has traveled more than 3.7 million miles and conducted more than 2,100 workshops and seminars for agricultural producers and agribusiness groups. He also has published four books and more than 265 articles on financial and business-related topics and regularly writes for Farm Journal, Top Producer, AgriFinance, and the Journal of Agricultural Lending.

"Farm transition is something most people only deal with once in their lifetime, so they don't have much experience with it," Siegrist said. "That's why we're bringing in a nationally recognized expert with 20 years of experience and observations from across the country. Hopefully he will help people see transition options they maybe hadn't thought about."

Topics Kohl will cover include the 10 rules of transition management, how to reduce deferred taxes, how much will you need in retirement, the 10 pitfalls of business transition, keys to bringing in the next generation, and family living cost and family conflict.

Family members about to retire from the farm operation and those assuming more ownership should both benefit from the topics, Siegrist said.

Check-in will begin at 9 a.m. with the seminar beginning at 9:30 a.m. and lasting until 3 p.m. Registration for the event before Dec. 10 is $20 for the first family member and $10 for each additional member. After Dec. 10, registration is $25 for the first family member and $15 for each additional one. Meal costs are included in the fee.

For registration or additional information about the Family/Business Transition Seminar, contact the Licking County office of Ohio State University Extension at (740) 349-6900.

Farm Tax Considerations During Drought Year

COLUMBUS, Ohio — In a drought year, tax regulations allow farmers to postpone paying some income taxes until next year. But farmers should be careful about choosing that route, said David Miller, farm management specialist at the east district office of Ohio State University Extension.

"Regulations allow for income deferral or postponement if weather-related conditions cause excess livestock sales or crop failures," Miller said.

If any type of livestock — market, dairy or breeding — is sold because of weather-related conditions, and the sales total more than the farmer would normally sell in a year, the income from the excess animals can be deferred to the next tax year.

For example, farmers may normally sell beef calves at one year of age in the spring. Reduced pasture or hay from the drought may have forced some farmers to sell calves this fall instead of holding them until spring. If the farmers are in a federally declared disaster area, they can elect to defer the calf sale income from 1999 to 2000.

A similar provision exists for crops. If a farmer receives crop insurance or federal disaster payments for crop damage caused by flood, drought or other natural disasters, an election can be made to defer that income to the next tax year, Miller said. To qualify, producers must be able to show they would have normally sold the crops in the following year.

"But deferring drought-related income until next year, when farm income likely will be higher in most cases, will only mean more tax liability in the future," he said.

If estimated 1999 taxable income seems low, farmers should do things now that will remove some tax burden from next year's budget, such as making additional sales of grain and livestock, postponing purchases of inputs and supplies to 2000, not claiming any section 179 expenses which allow farms to accelerate depreciation of farm equipment into one year versus spreading it over seven years, and not deferring drought-related income, he said.

If, however, government drought-relief payments, drought-related sale of livestock or good crop yields despite the dry weather make taxable income significantly higher than normal this year, Miller said farmers should postpone sales, purchase inputs and supplies for 2000, claim the section 179 expense and defer drought-related income.

"Farmers really need to look at their own situation and do some estimating before deciding whether or not to defer drought-related income to next year," he said. "But it's likely that in most cases taxable income will be lower this year because of the drought, so farmers should go ahead and include the drought income this year. Good tax management is not minimizing tax liability, but rather focusing on avoiding large fluctuations in income to maximize after-tax income for the year."

To properly plan for taxes this year, he said farmers should update farm records, make a nine or 10 month summary of income and expenses, estimate income and expenses for the remainder of the year, estimate depreciation without any 179 expense, and calculate income and self-employment taxes for 1999. Estimating 2000's income, expenses and tax liability also will help decide how to manage the tax liability for 1999, Miller said.

There also may be additional government payments to help with things such as water development and feed purchases that are not eligible for deferral but need to be factored in as farmers examine their overall tax situation for the drought year.

For more information about tax considerations during this drought year, farmers can contact their county office of Ohio State University Extension and should be sure to consult with their tax adviser. The latest Internal Revenue Service Farmer's Tax Guide containing information related to tax provisions in a drought year is also available at county Extension offices.

Build Sweet Holiday Memories

So many cherished holiday traditions start with special treats and sweets. They tantalize taste buds and ignite memories, warm the heart and create connections between generations. Even with hectic holiday schedules, just slowing down a bit to create something special for family and friends can capture the essence of this joyful season—and these treats are made easy with no baking required

A tradition that dates to 18th-century Germany, cookie houses were inspired by the Brothers Grimm folk tale that turned into a classic. In fact, ever since Hansel and Gretel wandered through a dark forest and discovered a fanciful cottage made entirely of candy canes, gingerbread and sugar plums, cookie houses have been a delightful holiday tradition

This European tradition traveled to the New World and became especially popular in America during the Victorian era when all sorts of handmade Christmas crafts flourished. Even today, dripping with sugar icicles and decorated with rooftops of colorful cookies, candy windows and other sweet architectural details, these fanciful houses, laden with their promises of treats, continue to enchant children of all ages at Christmastime.

'Tis the season for family

For renewing traditions For using the family heirlooms

And so I had fished this heirloom from its almost-forgotten spot in the kitchen cupboard, wiped off dust which had accumulated on it and pondered its history What takes could be told by this simple,yet beautiful, utilitarian tool?

It's made of solid wood, probably pine, with carefully crafted handles which fit comfortably in the hand. Natural oils from the process of food preparation over the years have polished its smooth surface and aged it to a soft brown patina

How many pies had this rolling pin prepared over the years? It had been passed down to us by a great-aunt, not long after our wedding day, which had coincided with the wedding anniversary of the rolling pin's previous owner. So, this rolling pin came with a history, a tradition, and the potential of serving many more generations

Its well-fitted handles roll smoothly within their fittings in the sturdy wooden cylinder, making the rolling of dough an easy task But even with an heirloom rolling pin, make pie dough "from scratch" is a labor-intensive tradition And so I don't bake many But this was for pumpkin pie baking, not just a seasonal favorite but a special treat beloved by grandson Josh

Having their family back home to share the holidays with is a special reason to renew some traditions that had fallen by the wayside in recent years Thus, this year's holiday pumpkin pies are steeped in tradition including the "butchering" of one of the giant pumpkins (actually a squash variety) we'd grown between the dairy barns Cooked, pureed and ready for use, the pumpkin provided lots of fresh pie material and oodles left over to freeze

The pies even baked in stoneware pie pans which had been gifts early in our marriage and which, with luck, (meaning I won't drop them on the floor) will live long lives Hopefully to go on to become kitchen heirlooms to some succeeding generation

Does a pumpkin "from scratch brought into use another traditional tool, not quite yet an heirloom, but headed there My well-worn, discolored-aluminum Foley food mill which looks like a saucepan fit with a circling blade turned by a hand crank is the perfect kitchen tool for pureeing cooked pumpkin chunks The cranked blade "mushes" the softened chunks into a bright golden puree, while separating the tough shell residue for recycling to compost

Once the food mill had been dug out of storage, it seemed natural to utilize it a bit longer So, while geared up into the food processing mode, I tackled another kitchen tradition Waiting for such an occasion were a couple of bags of assorted apples, gathered from a friend's orchard ahead of the last chilling frost Kettles filled with quartered apples, cooking soft in their steamy heat, filled the house with a fragrance surpassing any synthetic air freshener

Cooked to mush, with their peels and cores strained out by the food mill, the applesauce went into yet more heirlooms, canning jars we are handing down through the family. Three generations of us still do some home canning, and pass the glass containers engraved with Ball (and a few Atlas) quart and pint jars down from one to another.

How many more generations will make use of heirloom rolling pins and canning jars? As we eat more meals on the run in our cars, or devise quickie menus from an increasing array of ready-made selections from supermarket deli departments, will anyone cook at home in the future? Or prepare pumpkins or applesauce from scratch?

And will anyone really care, anyway?

Our grandmothers made their own soap Pounded clothes clean on washboards Blackened the oil lamps and trimmed their wicks I certainly don't care to utilize heirloom tools made for those once-common household task

And our yet-unborn, great-granddaughters (or sons), may feel the very same way about rolling pins

'Grossdawdy' Houses

"Grossdawdy" is the Pennsylvania Dutch word for "grandfather." Amish families often build additions to their homes to provide living spaces for grandparents and call these sections Grossdawdy Houses. Intrigued by the variety, shapes, and sizes of Grossdawdy Houses, Jim Drescher photographed 14 of the Lancaster County versions. Posters featuring Grossdawdy Houses are available at local art galleries or by sending $10 to MIJIM Enterprises, P.O. Box 385, Talmage, PA 17580.

Vitamin and Mineral Guide for Seniors

You have seen the ads on television for vitamin and minerals specially formulated for "seniors." Did you wonder, "Should I take a supplement and if so, which type?"

There has been much confusion about vitamin and mineral supplementation, much of it generated by the manufacturer's ad to catch your eye and your dollar The following guide will answer questions about vitamin and mineral supplementation

Do I need a vitamin and mineral supplement? Physicians often prescribe dietary supplements to correct nutrient deficiencies clearly diagnosed in their patients. For example, those with anemia may be advised to take an iron supplementation. However, taking an iron supplement without a doctor's consultation may be harmful Too much iron can lead to hemochromatosis (iron overload) in the one out of every 250 Americans who inherited genes for this disease

The bottom line is to discuss this subject with your physician He or she may ask you to describe specific symptoms and may conduct tests before prescribing a certain supplement Otherwise, your doctor may recommend a multivitamin and mineral supplement

As a senior, am I at risk for certain nutritional deficiencies? Yes Because of the natural aging process, certain nutrient deficiencies are more likely to occur in those individuals over age 50 As we age, our stomachs produce less gastric acid Less acid leads to inadequate absorption of vitamin B12 and other nutrients from the foods we consume. Vitamin B12 is an important nutrient in the formation of red blood cells and its deficiency can cause anemia. A Vitamin B12 supplement is easily absorbed because it's not bound to the food

Seniors, both men and women, are also a risk for osteoporosis, especially if they have avoided milk products or have had a poor diet Calcium supplements are generally recommended, but more evidence indicates that additional Vitamin D supplementation will assist in calcium absorption from the foods we eat

Guidelines:

- Always consult with your physician before taking any vitamin, mineral or herbal supplement. "Natural," used on the supplement label, does not mean "safe." Arsenic and hemlock are natural, too.
- If you have a poor diet, consider taking an ordinary multivitamin and mineral supplement with 100% of the daily values listed on the label.
- If you don't consume at least three dairy foods a day, take a supplement with 300 mg of calcium, or consume calcium fortified juice. Make sure the supplement has 400 IU of vitamin D. If you're over 70 and get little or no sun, make sure you get 600 IU of vitamin D
- If you are older than 50, consider taking a multivitamin and mineral supplement with at least 25 micrograms (mcg) of vitamin B12.

Senior Center Welcomes Dairy Princess

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

COLUMBIA (Lancaster Co.) — Perhaps no age group is more aware of the importance dairy foods play in the diet than senior citizens.

Many of them know first hand the ravages of osteoporosis and that a calcium rich diet helps prevent bone loss.

Members of the Columbia Senior Center invited Lancaster County Dairy Princess Elisa Ranck to hear what she had to say about calcium intake.

"And we just wanted to meet her," said a member.

Elisa told them how she milks the cows and feeds the calves on her parents' 122-acre farm in Paradise. She shared some seldom known facts. For example, real and imitation dairy products do not have the same nutritional value, and margarine and butter have the same amount of calories.

Elisa explained that milk should be listed as the first ingredient in a dairy product and the importance of looking for the "real" seal to assure that the item is made with milk and not an imitation product.

Members were surprised to hear that it takes 10 pounds of whole milk to make one pound of cheese.

Adquate calcium intake during childhood is necessary for the development of peak bone mass. Elisa said that she had read that one study determined that 95 percent of bone density is formed by the time a female is 17 years old.

Elisa then led members in a game of "Cowpardy" similar to the popular television show Jeopardy. Participants could select from the following categories: Bovine eating habits, Bovital statistics, Cowology, Cow-pourri, and Cow-Bullary.

Questions ranged from simple to complex and proved to be educational with lots of laughs. Some of the questions revealed that cows spend 6½ hours daily eating, that the average Holstein weighs 1,400 pounds, produces 3 gallons of milk at each milking, drinks a bath tub of water and eats 40 pounds daily, and provides the equivalent of 480 hamburgers when butchered.

Elisa reminded members that whole milk and skim milk products provide the same amount of calcium.

Some of the members shared their own stories about growing up on a farm. They recalled transporting milk to the creamery and how goat's milk proved beneficial to a sibling with allergies.

Of the many groups that Elisa has visited, she said this was the first group who could name five of the six major dairy breeds: Guernsey, Jersey, Holstein, Brown Swiss, Aryshire, and Milking Shorthorn.

Members of the Columbia Senior Center gather around Lancaster County Dairy Princess Elisa Ranck. Playing "Cowpardy" brought back a lot of memories for some of the members who were raised on the farm and proved to be an educational experience for everyone.

Build Holiday Baking Memories

Candy Cane Cottage: Follow directions for Village Square House, cutting 4 inches off carton base To make door, use sugar wafers instead of gum sticks Use individually wrapped large size red and candy cane Life Savers roll candies for roof instead of crackers, cutting candies in half to fit as needed. Use stick gum to make regular and arched windows as pictured. To make chimney, use a sharp knife to cut out center of 1 bubble gum, leaving about 1/8-inch around outside edge; stack on top of two more pieces bubble gum attaching with icing. Place chimney on roof; stand holiday-shaped bear graham snack in chimney opening.

Cookie Mansion: Follow directions for Village Square House, but do not discard bottom carton piece. Attach bottom carton piece, bottom-side up, next to one side of carton top and attach with tape for garage. Attach holiday graham crackers to house and garage, cutting to fit. To make door, use tea biscuit cookie instead of gum sticks For garage door, use chocolate graham crackers cut to 2 1/2-inch height Use stick gum for windows For roof, split chocolate sandwich cookies, leaving filling on one side. Use red and white gum sticks for garage roof railing. Stand holiday-shaped bear graham snacks on garage roof.

White Royal Icing: Beat 1/2 cup refrigerated pasteurized egg whites and 1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar in large bowl with mixer at high speed until blended Blend in 1 (16-ounce) package powdered sugar at low speed; beat at high speed until stiff peaks form, about 5 minutes. Keep frosting covered at all times by placing plastic wrap directly on frosting surface to prevent hardening. (Three tablespoons meringue powder or 2 tablespoons egg white powder dissolved in 6 tablespoons warm water may be substituted for pasteurized egg whites.)

During the holidays, you don't have time for baking mishaps.

The expert home economists at the Land O' Lakes Holiday Bakeline have helped more than a quarter a million people with holiday baking over the past 10 years. The Bakeline is open from Nov. 1 until Dec. 24, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. (CST) seven days a week.

For advice or for a free copy of "Baking Traditions to Last a Lifetime, call the Bakeline at 1-800-782-9606.

Here are the three most commonly asked baking questions and answers to help you avoid baking blunders:

• Why are my cookies flat and spreading?

Most likely the dough is too soft. Remember not to over soften the butter or beat the dough too long. Try refrigerating the dough for one to two hours until it's well chilled. If the dough is still too soft, stir in 1 to 2 tablespoons flour.

• How long can cookie dough be frozen?

Most cookie dough can be refrigerated up to two days and frozen up to two months. Package the dough in an air-tight container or freezer bag before storing.

• What can I do if my dough is too dry and crumbly?

Try add 1 to 2 tablespoons milk or cream to soften your dough. Dry cookie dough will most likely result in dry, crumbly cookies.

Consuming Thoughts

by

Fay Strickler

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.

Did you know that the pomegranate, sometimes referred to as the "apple of many seeds," and is enjoyed not for the skin or even the flesh but for the multitude of seeds found inside. Actually a large berry, the multicelled fruit has many seeds, each enveloped in a pleasantly acid, juicy, reddish pulp enclosed in a tough rind of golden brown tinged with red.

Pomegranates add texture and a burst of flavor to any dish. They are low in sodium and high in potassium, and supply modest amounts of vitamin C. A 3 1/2-ounce portion of pomegranate seeds yields 60.

Pomegranates are readily available September through December Choose large pomegranates that are heavy for their size and have a fresh-looking (not dried-out) rind

Pomegranates are sold ripe and ready to eat. You can store them for short periods of time at room temperature, uncovered, out of direct sun-many cooks like to use them for decoration. For longer storage, refrigerate whole fruit or seeds in plastic bags or containers; or freeze the seeds separately. Pomegranate seeds can be frozen by scattering seeds in a rimmed pan in a single layer then freeze until firm, then pack in freezer containers. Freeze for up to 6 months. To use, spoon out desired quantity and thaw

Take care when seeding and juicing pomegranates You may want to wear gloves and an old shirt during these procedures because the fruit produces a red juice that will stain. (The persians used pomegranates as a dye.) One good-size fruit will yield about 3/4 cup seeds or 1/2 cup juice.

To open the pomegranate cut out the blossom end and remove some of the pith Lightly score the skin from end to end; gently break the fruit.

Once the fruit is opened, begin the arduous but rewarding task of removing the seeds from the pith. you can give this job to children, who seem to enjoy removing and eating the pits and can be so occupied for hours Only the seeds, with their sweet-tart flavor and juice-squirting texture, are edible

To remove seeds, cut crown end off pomegranate; lightly score rind lengthwise in several places. Immerse scored fruit in a bowl of cool water and let soak for 5 minutes. Then, holding fruit under water, break sections apart with your fingers, separating seed from membranes as you work; seeds will sink to the bottom while rind and membranes float to the top. Skim off and discard membranes and rind. Pour seeds into a colander, let drain, then gently pat dry.

To juice pomegranates, whirl seeds in a blender or food processor, 1 1/2 to 2 cups at a time, until liquefied. Pour through a cheesecloth-lined wire strainer and let drain. Refrigerate juice for up to 5 days; freeze for up to 6 months.

Each medium-size pomegranate yields about 3/4 cup seeds or 1/2 cup juice.

Here are a few serving ideas· Sprinkle pomegranate seeds on any type of fruit, poultry, fish, or green salad. Use as a garnish for grilled or roasted meats, fish or poultry. For desserts, sprinkle on tapioca, custard, or ice cream. Pour Pomegranate Syrup over ice cream, or add to sparkling water and serve as a beverage.

Pomegranate Syrup (Grenadine)

In a 1- to 2-quart pan, combine 1 cup pomegranate juice and 1/2 cup sugar. Bring to a boil over high heat, stirring until sugar is dissolved; then boil for 1 minute. Remove from heat and let cool. Cover and refrigerate for up to 2 weeks; freeze for longer storage. Makes 1 1/4 cups.

Best Baking Sheet To Bake Cookies?

When the editor of a leading gourmet cooking magazine set out to test a variety of baking sheets, the results were quite interesting The same cookies were baked on three types of sheets—insulated sheets, sheets with sides, and sheets without sides Nonstick sheets were included in each category. The outcome showed that high cost is not necessarily related to high performance.

For easy cookie removal, insulated baking sheets turned out to be the most satisfactory Cleanup however, was more difficult Cookie sheets with sides produced the most evenly baked cookies, but the resulting product was a little dry. Sheets without sides performed similar to the insulated ones, but the cookies tended to be a bit too brown

Regardless of the category, lighter and shinier baking sheets consistently produced moist, golden cookies. Cookies baked on sheets with darker coatings were a darker color and has a less soft texture

ANSWER — Several weeks ago, Mildred Huffman of Lexington, Va., had sent a solution for preventing soggy crusts. Sorry the advice was not clear, but here is the correct procedure: Put one whole egg into the crust before baking and swish it around until the crust is coated with egg white, then pour the egg out of the crust. The egg may be used in the filling if desired. Bake the crust as usual.

Handicapped Riding Leaders Honored York Extension

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

BAIR (York Co.) — For offering their home, their horses, their hands, their help and their hearts, Anne and Jack Wagner have been named the 1999 Outstanding York County Extension Involvement winners.

The York couple was honored by the York Extension Service as a highlight of its annual meeting and dinner, held November 12 at the county's 4-H Center.

Anne and Jack Wagner became involved with the handicapped riding program about 20 years ago, when an Easter Seals therapist visited their horse farm with her daughter's Girl Scout troop. But even before that, the Wagners had combined their love of horses and service to young people as leaders of the White Rose 4-H Club.

The 4-H Therapeutic Riding program grew from their willingness to share their horses and their farm with horse lovers who also happened to be handicapped. Size of the group has ranged from 10 to 18 riders. Three volunteers are needed to assist with each handicapped rider, two sidewalkers and one leadsperson. Volunteers include members and alumni of the county's 4-H Horse Club programs, as well as friends and supporters from the industry and community.

Riders and program volunteers gather Tuesday evenings at the Wagner farm ro ride, do group riding exercises, play games and participate in an educational horse knowledge session. The final night of each summer's program wras up with a trail ride at Lake Williams in nearby Kain County Park and a group picnic.

Therapeutic riding helps to improve both physical strength and balance, as well as provide social and emotional growth for the handicapped 4-H club participants. Under the leadership of the Wagners and their many volunteers, many riders have overcome their fear of both horses and heights.

In addition to their leadership with the horse and riding therapy 4-H programs, the Wagners were instrumental in helping to develop a second equine show ring at Spring Valley County Park, where many 4-H horse programs and roundups are held.

Agriculture engineer Dan McFarland was saluted at the York Extension meeting for 10 years as a Penn State Cooperative Extension employee. Presenting the award was Dr. Michelle Rodgers, regional extension director.

Anne and Jack Wagner have been named the 1999 Outstanding York County Extension Involvement award winners for their leadership work with the 4-H Therapeutic Riding and Horse programs. From left are Michelle Grove, representing the York Extension Service, Anne and Jack Wagner, and Senator Mike Waugh, representing the York Extension Board of Directors.

Anne is a longtime judge of the 4-H SpeakOut Night and serves on the York County Parks Board. Both Anne and Jack are frequent horse show judges and Anne is a longtime instructor. Jack recently retired from the York Waste firm, allowing him more time to pursue his devotion to the equine industry.

Three extension staffers were recognized with length-of-service awards. Roxanne Price, county extension director and 4-H coordinator, is a 25-year staffer. She was honored for her quarter-century of extension service last week during the annual extension conference at Penn State.

Tom Becker, York extension horticulturist, was recognized for 15 years of service. Dan McFarland, multi-county agriculture engineeer, headquartered in York County, was recognized for 10 years of service.

Directors elected during the business meeting to serve on the Extension board are Roger Apple, Jeff Cochran, Felicia Dell, Dr. Don Cogniat, John Korver, Jeanne Wagman, John Zielinski, and Craig Zumbrum, 3-year terms, and Warren Weaver, 2-year term.

Old-Time Candy Kitchen exhibit at the Hershey Museum includes clear toy candy making at 11 a.m. 1 p.m., and 3:30 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays now though Dec. 19, and every day from Dec. 26-30. Here Nancy Fasolt watches a young visitor's delight. Need more information, call (717) 534-3439.

Make Clear Toy Candy

Pennsylvania-German children would "set their plates" on Christmas Eve Christmas morning they would find them filled with fruit, nuts and clear toys

The primary Christmas gift-giver of the Pennsylvania Dutch was "Christ-Kindel,' literally – the Christ Child The children were taught that "Christ-Kindel" riding on a donkey, would leave gifts for them on Christmas "Christ-Kindel" became a common Pennsylvania Dutch term for Christmas gift – a special gift of clear toy

To receive these gifts, the children would "set their plates" on Christmas Eve They would set their individual dinner plate at its place at the kitchen table On Christmas morning they would arise and go to the table to receive their gifts of fruit, nuts, and clear toys

This crystal clear candy in yellow, red, and green, with no flavorings added, is made simply of sugar, water and corn syrup. It finds its origin in south eastern Pennsylvania in the mid-1800s

The first clear toy molds were produced by Mills Bros and V Clad Co., both of Philadelphia. The 420 original molds produced cover a wide variety of shapes and sizes from a small rat lollypop to an 8" ship and camel

Children would actually play with the candy, hence the name toy Clear toy plates, cups, saucers, pitchers and baskets graced many a 'tea party'

Hung on the Christmas tree as ornaments, the clear toy preceded glass ornaments

The search for original metal clear toy molds continues — most are found in antique shops or in private collections

A clear-toy candy making demonstration will be held at Hershey Museum, Saturdays and Sundays, now through Dec. 19 and every day following Christmas from Dec. 26-31 For more information call (717) 534-3439.

Doug Roysdon and Sarah Capwell show off the expressive marionettes that are performing at Hershey Museum on Dec. 11 at 1:30 p.m., 3 p.m., and 7 p.m.

Why are veins blue if my blood is red?
Because blood is the No. 1 transportation system for the body.
Blood carries nutrients from your stomach to cells all over your body. It also moves oxygen from your lungs to your cells, carries waste products from your kidneys, and moves hormones secreted in one part of your body to other parts.
All of this transportation takes place in either arteries or veins. Veins carry blood to the heart. It has less oxygen than the blood in the arteries. (The oxygen was delivered to your cells!) Because oxygen gives blood its bright red color, the oxygen-low blood in your veins has a deep red color with almost a bluish tint. Usually, nurses, doctors or lab technicians take blood samples from your vein. The next time you give blood, watch the syringe fill. The blood will look really dark. You can also look closely at the skin on your wrists. You might be able to see a few veins, especially if you have a light complexion.
Blood in the arteries goes out from the heart to the body. This blood — having just refueled — is loaded with oxygen and nutrients Microscopic capillaries carry oxygenated blood all the way to the tissue in your skin. Scraped elbows or knees break open these tiny, tiny arteries — and red blood oozes out.
Scientifically yours,
Twig

Society Of Farm Women Name Scholarship Winners

GLEN ROCK (York Co.) — Several years ago, the Pennsylvania Society of Farm Women found a creative way to help several college students fund their education. Compiling a collection of their members best-loved and most successful recipes, the Society of Farm Women, guided by their then past-state-president Naomi Bupp, Glenn Rock, published what has become a huge cookbook success story.

With the profits from their unique cookbook, now in its tenth printing with more than 22,000 sold, the Society has established a fund which provides several scholarships each year to college students studying in fields of home economics and agriculture. To be eligible for the Pa. Society of Farm Women scholarship, an applicant must be the child or grandchild of a society member.

"For 1999, we have been able to grant $9,000 in scholarships to 10 deserving applicants," says chairman Naomi Bupp. "We're really pleased that this year's awards are $2,000 more than we were able to provide last year and that the cookbook program has allowed the Society to continue assisting our young people."

Recipients of $1,000 scholarships are Emily Bankert, Red Lion; Jessica Latham, Quarryville; Blain Brown, Hershey; Jim Hoffheins, Marietta, and Adam Kopp, Middletown. Also Troy Miller, Fredericksburg, Curtis Beidel, Newburg, and Cory Mellott, Mercersburg. Two scholarship winners from prior years were given additional awards of $500 each. They are Janice Youse, Oley, and Jere Wingert, St. Thomas.

Emily Bankert, 18, is the daughter of Michael and Joyce Bankert, Red Lion. She is a home economics student at the Indiana University of Pennsylvania and graduated in June from Red Lion Area High School. Emily was active in both 4-H and FFA programs, with projects including sheep, livestock and meats judging, and public speaking. Emily won numerous FFA awards and honors, including outstanding York County FFA member.

Jessica Latham, 18, is the daughter of Steve and Donna Latham, Quarryville. A graduate of Solanco High School, she is a freshman at Penn State majoring in animal science as a preliminary to veterinary training. Jessica was active in a variety of school, 4-H and FFA program including parliamentary procedure and debate teams, and a member of many of the Solanco band and music programs.

Blaine Brown, 19, is the son of Bill and Rhelda Brown, Hershey. He is a sophomore ag production major at Black Hawk College, Kewanee, Illinois and 1998 graduate of Elizabethtown High School. Active in school sports as well as 4-H and FFA, Blaine especially focused on livestock programs, including extensive judging and exhibiting. He has continued his judging interest on the Black Hawk livestock judging team.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

We've had a busy time recently Our house was almost overrun with grandchildren It certainly was not like one couple that I met who had 21 grandchildren under five years of age or the well-known Osmond Family with 54 grandchildren

But when they are under two years of age, they are inquisitive and get into everything So, glass objects are put out of reach, keys are hidden, and even cats run when they see them coming

We had three cooks in the kitchen at one time The food turned out fine and we all probably learned something new Everyone added a new touch to the dishes These are the times when it is very nice to have a dishwasher to help with the small items However, I still do the pans and kettles in the sink.

Some of the children like make-believe games, some like outdoor active kinds, while others would rather sit and watch a tape tell a story It is interesting to hear the kindergartner as he learns to read he knows his sounds and can figure out many words

The books that my children had are now reread to the little ones. It is difficult to read new stories as they want the same ones read over and over again.

Now it is time to launder all the towels and sheets and to return things to their regular spots on the side tables. And, to check on all of those leftovers in the refrigerator that have accumulated A time to remember the conversations of the last few days and count our blessings.

Put Color In Garden And On Plate

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Consumers and chefs looking to make their recipes more colorful may want to consider using potatoes with a hint of tint.

William Lamont, associate professor of vegetable crops in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, recommends the following colored potato varieties currently available in most major seed catalogs.

• Caribe: With purple skin and white flesh, this variety is versatile. "The purple skin tends to fade the longer you leave it unharvested," Lamont says.

• Cranberry Red: This variety has red skin and flesh the color of rosé wine.

• Michigan Purple: This variety has purple skin and white flesh "It's a rounder type of potato," Lamont says

• All Red. It exhibits red skin and a slightly darker red flesh

• Yukon Gold: With yellow skin and yellow flesh, this variety has become the most popular specialty potato

• Keuka Gold It has yellow skin and pale yellow flesh. "It's a great all-around potato," Lamont says

• All Blue. This variety has blue skin and blue flesh. "This variety will sometimes have an odd shape," Lamont says.

Nancy Hess becomes teary-eyed whenever she recalls the family history associated with her mother's restored doll.

Recapture Childhood Memories

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

BIRD IN HAND (Lancaster Co.) — This is the season when people think about making memories and remembering the past.

While it might be easy to remember past events, it's often difficult to know how to pass on memories to the next generation and how to create new ones for your own family.

A recent three-day workshop, Preserving Memories, presented lots of unique ideas. Seminars and workshops demonstrating ideas were conducted at the Bird-in-Hand Family Restaurant. The seminar may become an annual event. If you want to be on the mailing list for the next Preserving Memories workshop, call Nancy Hess at (800) 537-2535.

Overcoming Grief While Building Memories

"Mom was the glue that held our family together," said Helen Layton, Warfordsburg, about the family's four daughters and one son. "I was afraid we would drift apart after Mom died."

While sorting out her mother's belongings, Helen found 85 feedsacks, the kind that feed had been sold in during the 1930s-1950s. As Helen fingered the feedsack material, which was washed and neatly folded, she had an idea.

"What if we divided the material between us and each made a quilt with it?" she asked.

Helen asked her siblings to set aside one day a week to get together and sew quilt patches. All the stitching on the quilts are done by hand.

"It's more relaxing to sew by hand, easier to match corners on the patches, and easier to talk while working," Helen said.

Although only Helen had made a quilt before, all the siblings are having the time of their lives as they stitch together more than 15,000 pieces.

"I never thought my brother, who is 68 years old, would do this, but he loves it," Helen reported.

"As we work on the material, we recall that Mom had an apron out of the same material or Aunt Thelma had an apron out of one of the patterns. We all wore feedsack dresses to school," Helen said.

The siblings, all retired, take turns bringing a full-course meal every week.

"The meal must include dishes Mom used to make, such as kraut dumplings or hash," Helen said.

As the siblings sew, they talk about butchering, about making apple butter, and other childhood activities.

"It's been so healing," Helen said of the memories.

"We were always close but had been drifting apart after Mom died. Now we are closer than we ever were."

As the grandchildren observed their parents having so much fun, many of them wanted to get into the act. So the project has grown to 29 quilts. Some addition feed sacks needed to be purchased to accommodate those being made by the grandchildren, but each one will have some fabric from their grandmother.

Working on the quilts are relatives ranging in ages from 9 years to 78.

"It's a great way to keep memories going. The grandchildren said they learn so much just by listening to us talk," Helen said.

Jane Clark Stapel, feed sack expert and founder of the International Feedsack Club, said that feedsacks played a significant role in our heritage.

"These vintage American fabrics played an important part in providing beautiful materials for dresses, curtains, quilts, and other fabric crafts," Stapel said.

Doll Restoration

Nancy Hess of the Bird-in-Hand Family Inn and Restaurant, gets teary-eyed when she talks about memories of her mother and the part she had in making her mother's dream come true.

Her mother was only 9 years old when her mother died. She told Nancy that she felt guilty that she had rejected a doll that her mother gave her because she preferred "tomboy" activities. It wasn't until after she was a mother that she realized how disappointed her own mother must have been to see a doll that she had worked so lovingly to clothe cast aside. Because Nancy's grandmother had died at such a young age, Nancy's own mother had little to remember her by. She told her daughter that she had given the doll to her best friend.

Nancy prayed she could find that doll. Years went by. Then Nancy heard of a public sale and she recognized the name as her mother's childhood friend.

On a whim, Nancy phoned her mother's childhood friend, now in her 80s, and ask if she still had the doll.

The friend seemed puzzled and said that she couldn't remember it. But a week later, Nancy got a call at 11:30 p.m. on the night before the auction. The woman had just found a doll, broken into pieces and stored in a box.

The wooden compressed doll clothed in feedsack clothes matched Nancy's description.

Nancy paid $400 to have the doll restored at a doll hospital.

"Money was tight at that time because my husband had left me. I didn't have the money to pay for the restoration, so I took a part-time job in the evening to earn the money to pay for it."

After the doll was restored, Nancy had her mother's childhood friend present the doll.

"The two giggled and laughed like little kids," Nancy said of the presentation.

Now her own mother is gone, and the doll has been passed onto Nancy.

Whenever Nancy looks at the doll, she gets teary-eyed remembering the story connected to the doll and the unlikely possession of it.

Create A Teddy

"Don't trash those old furs. Have a teddy bear created just for you," said Dina Denning, North Huntingdon.

With furs from grandma's coat and hat, Dina creates adorable bears with matching coat and hat. Embroidered hankies, hat pins, old bedspreads, blue jeans, old ties, and feedsacks are some of the other pieces she uses to create bears and their outfits. Dina has even created a bear using the tags found in a variety of coats. And she's made numerous wedding gowns in the exact replica of the owners to dress the bear.

Bag Memories

Ann Hitz, Deodate, creates memories using apron strings. That's right — apron strings.

She said that in the old days, thrifty homemakers cut off the strings when their aprons wore out. The strings were used to tie up potato sacks or tomato stalks in the garden.

When a neighbor lady found a cache of apron strings, she sought Ann's help in preserving these pieces of America's history.

From the pieces, Ann created a yo-yo pillow top and used the pieces to appliqued another pillow.

Helen Layton and Evelyn Heiser, two of six siblings, find healing in stitching quilts made from the 85 feedsacks that were found among their mother's belongings.

Naomi D'Alexandro and her daughter Dina Denning work together to create teddy bears and clothing using furs and heirloom pieces from owners.

the Signature of FFA Success

West Snyder FFA Chapter Named To "Top Ten" In Nation

The West Snyder FFA Chapter received a "Model of Innovation" Award at the 1999 National FFA Convention for excellence in student development.

Only 10 FFA chapters in the nation are awarded with this honor bestowed upon them by the National FFA Organization.

West Snyder FFA was ranked first of Pennsylvania's 179 FFA chapters based on their program of work and chapter activities. After completing the chapter award application and placing first in state competition, the application was forwarded to the National FFA Center for ranking on a national level.

The chapter recently received a National "Three Star" Gold Emblem at the 72nd National FFA Convention in Louisville, Ky., for their efforts in the National Chapter Award Program. Accepting the award for the chapter on Oct. 26-31 was Jessica Walter, chapter vice president of student development and Sandy Opdyke, chapter secretary.

The National Chapter Award program is designed to improve the chapter's program of activities, assist chapters in evaluating their accomplishments, and reward chapters for providing educational experiences for the entire membership.

Jodi Fetterolf and Heidi Good completed a 15-minute computerized presentation to a panel of judges on the community development activities of the West Snyder FFA Chapter. The presentation was followed by a five-minute interview. Chapter members Maria Trego and Heidi Good presented a similar show to a different panel of judges on the chapter development activities of the FFA chapter. The team of presenters wrote their own scripts and constructed the presentation using PowerPoint computer software. The judges commended the West Snyder FFA Chapter "as an excellent example of just how much a small FFA chapter can accomplish."

Kate Heeter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Heeter, competed in the National FFA extemporaneous public speaking career development event and earned a silver medal. Kate advanced from the preliminary round to the semi-final round and ended the event by placing in the top 20 in the nation.

"The students competing in this event are the very best. It takes a tremendous devotion and ability for the FFA members to advance themselves to this national level of competition," said Jim Armbuster, National FFA Organization teacher service specialist

Event participants were evaluated on their ability to deliver a 30-minute speech on one of three general agriculture topics—agriscience and technology, agrimarketing, and international agricultural relations. The speech must be four to six minutes in length. Members are given 30 minutes to prepare the speech and have a five-minute question and answer period following the speech.

Luke Zerby, West Snyder FFA member and the 1998-99 Pennsylvania FFA president, was awarded the American FFA Degree. The American Degree is the highest award the National FFA Organization can bestow upon its members. Only one in 231 FFA members advances to receive the American Degree. Representatives who traveled to the convention with Luke included his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nevin Zerby.

While at the 72nd Convention, West Snyder FFA members, along with approximatley 48,000 other members from across the nation, had the opportunity to hear film star Danny Glover speak. Relating his work ethic he learned while on his grandparents farm to his success in Hollywood today, Glover credited organizations such as the FFA for making a positive difference in the lives of others.

The members of the West Snyder FFA Chapter also served as Courtesy Corps members during the 72nd convention session. Maria Trego, former West Snyder FFA Officer and the 1999-2000 reporter for the Pennsylvania FFA Association, served as an official delegate at the National Convention, representing the Pennsylvania FFA Association.

Om a related activity, Todd Esbenshade, Chris Foor, Jennifer McWilliams, Melissa McWilliams, Sandy Opdyke, Heather Hollenbach, and Jessica Walter conducted a preconvention workshop on the PALS (Partners in Active Learning Support) program. This program was conducted with 600 elementary students from the Louisville area and 600 volunteer FFA members from across the nation. West Snyder FFA members conducted PALS presentations on agricultural literacy and team-building skills.

While in Kentucky, the members of the West Snyder FFA Chapter toured the Louisville Slugger Museum and factory. Here each West Snyder FFA member saw a Louisville Slugger baseball bat made every 15 seconds and received a free souvenir bat. They also toured Churchill Downs and the Kentucky Derby Museum. The Kentucky Derby Museum is undergoing a multimillion dollar expansion and renovation project. Members were able to view the new multimedia show entitled "The Greatest Race."

James Buchanan/ Conococheague FFA

On Oct. 26-31, the James Buchanan/Conococheague FFA attended the National FFA Convention in Louisville, Ky.

The Pennsylvania State FFA Dairy Cattle Evaluation Team and Agricultural Sales Team represented the chapter in contest. Six other members also attended the convention.

The Dairy Cattle Evaluation Team consisted of Kyle Burdette, Melinda Martin, Emme Mellott, and Emily Stuff. The members were required to evaluate six classes of dairy cattle, evaluate five Holstein cows for linear classification, figure out a sire selection problem, answer a dairy management exercise, and place four dairy animals pedigrees. The team placed 8th and received a gold medal. Each member received gold medals as well.

The Agricultural Sales Team members were Scott Reed, LeAnn Helman, Elizabeth Palmer, Dawn Goshorn, and Brandy Hutchison. The event included actual sales presentations, product display, market analysis, customer service, and employment skills. The team earned a silver medal. Scott Reed placed 11th and earned a gold medal, as well as a $500 scholarship. The other members earned silver medals.

The James Buchanan/ Conococheague FFA was also honored with a three star chapter award, the most a chapter can receive. The National Chapter Award program is designed to award those FFA chapters who actively implement the Mission and Strategies of the organization. These chapters improve their operations using a program of activities that emphasize student, chapter, and community development.

If your fields are as smooth as glass and free of obstructions, you probably don't need John Deere's exclusive shearhub protection. But if you work in fields with stumps, rocks, anthills, gopher mounds, or just uneven spots, you'll appreciate the fact that shearhubs are standard on all John Deere Rotary MoCo's.

How do they work? If a cutting disk hits a solid object, its hub shears. This protects the inner gears of the disk and prevents damage to the entire cutterbar. Replacing a shearhub is considerably easier and far less costly than replacing or repairing a cutterbar assembly on other makes. In fact, most John Deere MoCo owners carry replacement shearhubs into the field with them, just in case. Maybe you should, too.

Prevent Lead Poisoning From Soils Around Homes

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Most Americans know household lead can be a serious health risk, particularly for children less than 6 years of age.

Although generally less of a health risk than indoor lead sources, soils around older homes and near busy roadways can sometimes contain high concentrations of lead, said a soil scientist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Soils adjacent to heavy traffic volume areas in cities and busy roadways have the highest concentrations," said Richard Stehouwer, assistant professor of environmental soils. "Much of the lead in soils came from the lead compounds used as anti-knock agents in gasoline until 1989. The other major source of lead in residential soils is leaded paint."

Leaded paint was used on about 75 percent of houses built before 1978, when it was banned, Stehouwer explained. "Chalking, leaching, flaking, weathering, scraping, and sandblasting can cause deposits in the soil near the base of these houses, creating a 'halo' of contamination."

Although less widespread, airborne lead from industrial sources also may have contaminated nearby soils. "Because lead doesn't biodegrade or disappear over time, it can remain in soils for thousands of years," he said.

Children may be exposed to lead from direct contact with contaminated soil, airborne soil particles, or soil dust on shoes, clothing, or pets. Children 2 to 3 years of age are at particularly high risk because they often mouth dirty items such as toys, pacifiers, fingers, and hands.

"Normally, young children consume around 200 mg of soil per day when playing outside, about the volume of an aspirin tablet," Stehouwer said.

"Young children who exhibit 'pica' — the desire to eat soil — consume much larger quantities."

Low-level, chronic exposure of young children to lead can cause developmental and behavioral problems, such as reduced IQ and attention span, hyperactivity, impaired growth, learning disabilities, hearing loss, and insomnia.

Lead enters the body when it's eaten or breathed. People also may be exposed to lead by eating produce grown in or near contaminated soil. "Lead can be taken up from the soil into plant tissues," Stehouwer said. "Contaminated dust also may settle on edible leaves and fruits."

If you have concerns, Stehouwer suggests getting soils tested, particularly around older houses or roadways. "Several labs in Pennsylvania, including Penn State's Agricultural Analytical Services Laboratory, conduct these tests. Contact your county Penn State Cooperative Extension office, or look in the yellow pages under 'Laboratories' for labs that offer this service in your area," he said.

If your soil turns out to have "very low lead contamination" (less than 150 mg/kg), you don't need to be concerned about lead exposure, Stehouwer said. "But remember that other possible sources of exposure exist, such as home interiors or school or day-care playgrounds."

For soils with "low lead contamination" (150 to 400 mg/kg), Stehouwer suggests the following measures:

- Enforce a "clean hands" policy. "Children should wash their hands when they come in from playing outside," he said. "Teach kids not to put their fingers in their mouths."
- Provide children with a covered sandbox, away from areas with the highest lead levels. "Discourage them from playing in areas of known or suspected contamination. Maintain a healthy grass sod on play areas, and cover bare soil with mulch. You also should place rubber mats or carpets over the soil in high wear areas, such as under swings and the bottoms of slides."

Use the following gardening practices:

- Locate vegetable gardens as far as possible from roads, driveways and old painted structures. Plant leafy green vegetables and other hard-to-wash vegetables far from areas of suspected or known contamination.
- Incorporate organic material, such as peat moss, compost or manure, into garden beds at a rate of one-third by volume. For example, add three to four 4-cubic-foot bales of peat moss to 100 square feet of garden soil.
- Apply ground limestone (available at most lawn and garden stores) to the soil, as recommended by the soil test, to obtain a pH of 6.5 to 7.
- Protect gardens from airborne dust from contaminated soil (fine dust has the highest lead concentration). Erect a fence or plant a hedge between the garden and known or suspected areas of contamination. Lay down a mulch in the garden to cover bare soil.
- Wash vegetables carefully with a 1 percent vinegar solution or soapy water, then rinse thoroughly. Peel root crops and discard the outer and older leaves of leafy vegetables. Don't compost peelings or leaves.

With "medium lead contamination" (400 to 1,000 mg/kg), Stehouwer suggests the following measures, in addition to the practices described above:

- Apply 11 pounds of triple super phosphate or concentrated super phosphate fertilizer (available at most lawn and garden stores) per 100 square feet of soil. Mix thoroughly to a depth of 6 inches. One year later, test the soil again for pH and lime requirement. Apply ground agricultural limestone, as recommended by the soil test, to achieve a pH of 6.5 to 7.
- Cover areas with mulch and keep kids and pets out by erecting a fence or planting a dense evergreen ground cover.

"If you follow these gardening practices and add phosphate fertilizer as described, you can safely grow fruiting vegetable crops, such as tomatoes, peppers, squash, cucumbers, peas, beans and corn," Stehouwer said. "But don't grow leafy vegetables (lettuce, spinach, kale, cabbage) or root crops (carrots, radishes, turnips, beets) in this soil. Grow these crops in raised beds filled with uncontaminated soil and organic materials."

With "high lead contamination" (greater than 1,000 mg/kg), don't garden or let children or pets to come in contact with the soil, Stehouwer said.

Follow the steps described above to reduce lead availability and to keep the soil covered. If it's difficult to restrict access, or if the soil lead concentration is greater than 2,000 mg/kg, contact your local health department, cooperative extension office, or regional DEP office for advice.

For more information on lead, including soil testing, interpreting test results, and a list of agencies to contact about this topic, see the Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences publication "Lead in Residential Soils: Sources, Testing, and Reducing Exposure." Single copies are available free of charge from your county Penn State Cooperative Extension office or from the College of Agricultural Sciences Publications Distribution Center (call 814-865-6713).

Auction of Lionel "O" Gauge in the Pavilion

We put together two estates so we could preset an interesting day. We may have overdone it! Lobaugh, Max Gray, US Hobbies, Walther's, Scale Craft, Quality Craft, Ambroid Locos, and Rolling Stock. We have unbuilt and built-up kits. Excellent selection of bright billboard reefers, many of which are really old timers. Hundreds of freight cars – dozens of passenger cars. All kinds of parts, supplies and wheels, wheels, wheels. As an extension of the scale builder's hobby, a good library must be established. We have it! Numerous books, photos, plans, postcards, and information on the Pennsy and other railroads as well. Probably a ton of magazines. After selling 400 lots of "O" Scale and "O" Scale-related material, we have a van load of HO Trains.

A 10% buyer's premium will be applied.

Statistical Survey Will Allow Pennsylvania Growers To Provide Input For National Pesticide Initiative

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania fruit growers who produce apples, peaches, tart cherries and grapes, as well as farmers producing soybeans and potatoes may be asked to participate in a survey tracking how agricultural chemicals are used. The survey is being conducted by the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service, in cooperation with Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

The data are being collected in support of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Pesticide Impact Assessment Program (PIAP).

"The survey is intended to build a database of information for the USDA and the Environmental Protection Agency on how agricultural chemicals are used, as well as the quantities used for certain crops," said William Hoffman, senior extension associate in Penn State's Pesticide Impact Assessment Program. "Without good data, the EPA may assume that farmers use more pesticides than they actually do.

"When agencies consider whether to eliminate the use of agricultural chemicals or establish tolerance levels for residues, they seek information on usage patterns, economic benefits and other factors," Hoffman said. "The data also will help Penn State to produce relevant fact sheets and educational materials for growers interested in topics such as seed usage, tillage and integrated pest management."

Approximately 900 growers across the state will take part in the survey. They will be asked about which chemicals they use, application rates, how many acres are treated, integrated pest management practices and grower characteristics.

"Typically, the interview lasts an hour," Hoffman said. "Producers should prepare by having their agricultural chemical use records on hand so the interview goes quickly and smoothly."

Hoffman emphasized that all information from individual growers will remain confidential.

"Farmers have a direct stake in responding to the survey," Hoffman said. "For instance, the pesticide methyl parathion has been eliminated for use by fruit growers. Usage of another pesticide, azinphos-methyl, has faced further restrictions."

Hoffman said this year's survey will focus on usage data for Captan, mancuzeb and other fungicides. He said fruit and potato growers are particularly dependent on these agricultural compounds.

"Accurate pesticide usage information may help to preserve the continued use of these chemicals," he said.

Use of these compounds could be scaled back or eliminated under the tighter regulatory usage standards dictated by the established pesticide use levels that conform with the accepted guidelines for accumulated pesticide residues set by the recently enacted Food Quality Protection Act.

Hoffman also points out that information on usage patterns often influences manufacturers' decisions to submit a product for re-registration and approval with regulatory agencies. "Usage data are crucial in the approval process," he said.

Following the collection and analysis of survey data, state and national estimates of agricultural chemical use by the surveyed grower groups will be published in mid-2000.

Top Producers Choose Knight!

Congratulations to the La-Foster Farm

Terry and Gerald Foster are very proud of their record-breaking cow, Lucy, and rightly so. She produced 75,260 pounds of milk in her last lactation. They are also pleased with their Knight Reel Auggie® mixers, which, combined with the Foster's excellent management practices, have propelled the La-Foster herd average to the #1 milk production status in North Carolina. There is no comparison to the complete, palatable blend from a Knight Reel Auggie, with its patented reel and auger blending combination. Why else would the La-Foster Farm choose only Knight to feed their record-setting herd?

Western Pa. Vegetable, Berry Growers Seminar

BUTLER (Butler Co) — The annual Western Pennsylvania Vegetable and Berry Growers Seminar will help growers learn better ways to overcome some of their toughest problems, from weed control to family business management.

This year the seminar will be in Butler at the Days Inn, Tuesday, Dec 7, from 8 a.m. - 4 p.m.

This meeting draws commercial vegetable growers from western Pennsylvania, Ohio, and West Virginia to learn the latest information and products available to help them grow top-quality produce. Speakers from universities and private industry will discuss production practices, weed management, family business management, and other topics.

Commercial exhibitors include seed companies, chemical companies, machinery dealers, greenhouse suppliers, irrigation equipment, and distributors of a wide range of products for the commercial grower. Penn State extension and commercial suppliers cosponsor the seminar.

The focus of the vegetable production sessions is weed control, with featured guest speaker Dr. Rich Bonanno of the University of Massachusetts. Bonanno has a wealth of practical experience and will share ideas on both chemical and non-chemical weed control in many vegetable crops. Mike Orzolek, Penn State vegetable specialist, will tell growers how they can best manage their worst problem weeds.

After one of the driest growing seasons in recent memory, growers will hear Bill Wolfram, T-Systems International and Dr Bill Lamont of the Penn State Horticulture Department discuss irrigation management.

Concurrent morning business session: Special guest Dr. Cindy Ianarelli will conduct a workshop on family business issues for the farm family. She will talk about communication, bringing children into the business, estate planning, and other issues of running a family business. Ianarelli does consulting, lecturing, runs workshops and her own "Business Cents" Center for Family Business. She is known throughout the U.S. and the world for her work with family businesses.

Concurrent afternoon session for strawberry growers: Penn State Small Fruit specialist Kathy Demchak will talk with growers about varieties and what they can do about pest management in berry crops

To register or for more information, contact Penn State Extension, Westmoreland County, R. R #12, Box 202E, Greensburg, PA 15601, (724) 837-1402 or any Penn State extension office in western Pennsylvania.

Cornell's Agribusiness Economic Outlook Conference Dec. 14

ITHACA, N.Y. — The annual Agribusiness Economic Outlook Conference at Cornell University is scheduled Tuesday, Dec. 14, from 10 a.m.-3:30 p.m. On-site registration will begin at 9 a.m.

Sponsored by Cornell's Department of Agricultural, Resource and Managerial Economics, the conference will feature forecasts for agricultural and economic issues.

The plenary session begins at 10 a.m. in the David L. Call Alumni Auditorium of Kennedy Hall. William Tomek, Cornell professor of agricultural economics, will provide the national perspective on the economy and agriculture. At 11 a.m., David Lee, Cornell professor of agricultural economics, will discuss "International Agricultural Trade and Trade Agreements: Update and Future Prospects," a review of recent major international trade agreements, including the impacts on agricultural trade since their enactment in the early 1990s and future prospects for agricultural trade reforms and their likely effects on national and New York agriculture.

In the afternoon, two concurrent sessions will examine specific commodities and topics in greater depth. These sessions will begin at 1:15 p.m., as follows:

• Session A, David L. Call Alumni Auditorium — Tomek will describe the outlook for grains, feed and other farm outputs; Mark Stephenson, Cornell senior extension associate in agricultural economics, will discuss the dairy situation and outlook.

• Session B, Warren Hall, Room 245 — Gerald White, Cornell professor of agricultural economics, will discuss the fruit, grape, and wine outlook. Wen-Fei Uva, Cornell senior extension associate in agricultural economics, will address the outlook for vegetables and ornamental plants. Research updates on the economic dimensions of New York's greenhouse industry and value-added apple products will be presented, respectively, by Uva and Kristin Rowles, Cornell research support specialists in agricultural economics.

All prospective conference participants are asked to preregister. The preregistration fee is $35 if letters are postmarked by Dec. 1 and $50 if postmarked after Dec. 1 or for those registering on site. Registration fees for Cornell University and Cornell Cooperative Extension staff will be waived. Box lunches will be available for $6 and parking permits are being offered at $2 each.

For more information or to request a preregistration form, contact Carol Peters at (607) 255-1602 or Wendy Barrett at (607) 255-1851. Registrations will not be accepted over the phone.

Why zinc phosphate?

In metal roofing and siding paint holds better on heat formed zinc phosphate Room temperature formed it's brittle Also zinc phosphate is better than chromate because paint scrapes and peels off easier from chromate and rusts easier Almost the entire industry uses chromate or room temperature formed zinc phosphate If other manufacturers would use heat formed zinc phosphate as Everlast II then the industry would have less trouble with failed paint and premature rusting.

Attention
Dairy, Swine & Poultry Producers!
New Products Now Available...

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer these products to meet your nutritional needs. Manufacturing these products ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

GOLDEN PRO 46 XP
This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen. A course golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable. Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level

GOLDEN MEAL 40
An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations. Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorbtions

CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL
A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. A natural alternative to animal fats, this oil provides needed energy in various rations.

To make these products available, and to help you utilize your home raised soybeans Keystone Mills announces its

Soybean Exchange Program

As manufacturers and distributers of Golden Pro 46 XP and Golden Meal 40, we are anxious for you to try our products We are offering a soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products
